AT NOON MONDAY, President Roosevelt finished exactly half of his White House term, allowing for leap year's extra day in 1936. You will admit that he has been active, nothing at all like the rois faineants, "idle kings" of early French history.

Yesterday lawyers of the Hauptmann case were still talking. They talked so long, the judge was compelled to put off until next day his address to the jury.

On Monday Hauptmann's lawyer told the jury, first in a loud voice, and then in a soft, pleading voice, "Judge not, lest ye be judged."

On Tuesday, Attorney-General Wilentz, who had also gone to his Bible, came back with "He that killeth any man shall surely be killed."

Bruno Hauptmann's lawyer, Mr. Reilly, said nobody had proved Bruno's guilt. Attorney-General Wilentz told the jury that everything had proved Bruno's guilt, declared that Bruno Hauptmann was exactly "the fellow with the peculiar mental makeup who thought he was bigger than Lindy, and when the news of this crime came out he would look at the headlines screaming across the page, just as the headlines screamed across the pages when Lindy made that famous flight."

If Mr. Wilentz is right and the jury agrees with him, there will be other headlines "screaming" that Bruno Hauptmann will not read.

Wise managing editors and city editors changed their minds several times, while waiting for the talking to end. Some expect a quick decision, that would mean death.

Mr. Gauvreau bet with Mr. Clarke on a thirty-hour discussion by the jury. That would mean a disagreement or acquittal.

The average young newspaper man predicted death, and a quick decision by the jury.

In his attack on Hauptmann Mr. Wilentz invented a new description, "World public enemy number one."

While we emerge from the foggy Hauptmann trial, which has attracted one thousand times as much attention as the proposition to give the President $4,480,000,000 to spend, there is important news in Europe.

Mussolini has found the opportunity to show the world what it means when modern "Rome" starts moving.

He has mobilized an army with airplanes to supplement tanks and artillery, and the Emperor of Abyssinia, Haile Selassie, must discipline his unruly chiefs that have offended Mussolini by an attack on African colonies, or so much the worse, for Ethiopian Selassie, who believes that he is the direct descendant of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Maybe he is, but he will encounter a problem that King Solomon's wisdom could not solve for him, when he meets Mussolini's airplanes.

If wise, Selassie will pay the indemnity that Mussolini demands. As a practical business man, Mussolini always asks a

LEONARD
Granted Hearing
BY CURLEY

Governor Curley today granted Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard a public hearing, starting next Wednesday noon, on ouster proceedings.

The governor had the executive council votes to remove the commissioner without public hearing today.

He did not do so because, he said, Mayor Mansfield would reappoint him after the home rule bill is passed unless his "inefficiency and incompetency" are publicly aired.

Submitting an order for Leonard's removal to the council, the Governor said he and Council will publicly hear the case staring a week from today.

A complete airing of the long-discussed shortcomings of the Boston police department is promised.

A majority of the councillors favor Leonard's removal but believe, with the Governor, that the public is entitled to the inside facts of police condition that will develop from a public hearing.

SOUGHT MORE RUDY CASH

By Associated Press

New York, Feb. 13—Fay Webb Vallee today lost her attempt in Supreme Court to obtain a more generous slice of the income of her estranged husband, Rudy Vallee, the crooner.

Justice Salvatore Cotillo ended the action by granting motion to dismiss the case which had been made by counsel for Vallee.

He ruled that Mrs. Vallee had not proved her allegations that the separation agreement with her husband had been made through coercion and under duress.

The financial clause of the agreement gives Mrs. Vallee $100 a week maintenance money.

Attorneys for Vallee had promised that if their motion to dismiss was denied they would place in evidence phonograph records of alleged billing-and-cooing conversations between Mrs. Vallee and Gary Leon, the adagia dancer.

Vallee was in court today. His wife was not.

TEXT
CHARGE

TO HAUPTMANN TRIAL JURY

Official transcript of Justice Trenchard's charge to the jury today in Flemington, N. J.

Ladies and gentlemen of the jury:

The prisoner at the bar, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, stands charged in this indictment with the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., at the township of East Amwell in this county on the first day of March, 1932.

It now becomes your duty to render a verdict upon the question of his guilt or his innocence and upon the degree of his guilt, if guilty.

In doing this you must be guided by the principles of law bearing upon the case that I will now proceed to lay before you.

In the determination of all questions of fact, the sole responsibility is with the jury.

You are the sole judges of the evidence, of the weight of the evidence and of the credibility of the witnesses.

Any comments that I may make upon the evidence, will be made, not for the purpose of controlling you in your view of the facts, but

Madden Sentence 2 Months

Senator William F. Madden of Jamaica Plain faces two months in jail for forging CWA work slips.

Judge John A. Peters made the announcement today in federal court after a court-appointed doctor visited the Madden home in Forest Hills street, Jamaica Plain, to verify a report the Senator was ill.

He ordered five sentences of two months each, one on each indictment, to be served concurrently.

Senator Madden was not in court. Dr. Joel McCready, his family physician, reported him too ill with a cold.

After a plea by Madden's counsel, Judge Peters said:

"This sort of business must not go without punishment. I had in mind moderate sentences of three months. Now, considering the man's family and his physical condition, I will sentence him to two months on each of five counts, the sentences to run concurrently."

The sentences become effective when Madden is able to appear.

HAUPTMANN'S LAWYERS ENTER EXCEPTIONS TO RULINGS

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 13—Three hours after the Hauptmann trial jury retired, the first ballot was taken and showed the jurors standing 10 to 2 for conviction, the New York Evening Journal said in a dispatch from Flemington this afternoon.

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 13—The jury trying Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the kidnaping and murder of baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., began its deliberations before noon today after being instructed that it could return three possible verdicts—murder in the first degree, the same with recommendation for life imprisonment, or acquittal.

The final charge of the court paid particular attention to the disputed reliability of the important state witnesses, Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon and Amandus Hochmuth, and to the defense theories that a gang perpetrated the crime and that the dead Isidor Fisch gave Hauptmann the ransom money he had.

"Do you believe that?" were the concluding words of the court's remarks about each of these defense contentions.

Defense exceptions to the charge were heard after the jury retired at 11:23 a. m.

Justice Trenchard's charge, though brief, was sharp and to the point. It reviewed a number of the defense contentions with conclusions of "Do you believe that?"

On the state's important ladder evidence, the court asked the jurors:

"Does not the evidence satisfy you that at least a part of the wood from which the ladder was built came out of the flooring of the attic of the defendant?"

"If you find that the murder was committed by the defendant in perpetrating a burglary it is murder in the first degree," the court said, "even though the killing was unintentional.

"If there is a reasonable doubt that the murder was committed by the defendant in perpetrating a burglary he must be acquitted.

"If you find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree you may, if you see fit, by your verdict and as a part thereof recommend imprisonment at hard labor for life."

He asked the jurors if there was any doubt in their minds as to the reliability of the testimony of Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the ransom intermediary who said he paid Hauptmann Lindbergh's $50,000.

He asked them if they believed the defense contention that a gang perpetrated the crime.

Referring to the testimony of Arthur Koehler, wood expert, on the ladder, he said:

"You should consider the marks upon the wood and give the evidence in respect thereto such weight as you think it entitled to after a consideration of the credibility of the witness."

As to Hauptmann's own testimony:

"His interest in the result may be taken into consideration on the question of whether he is telling the truth. His previous conviction of crime may be considered only as affecting his credit as a witness.'

Of Amandus Hockmuth, the aged man who said he saw Hauptmann with a ladder in a car near the Lindbergh home on the day of the crime:

"This testimony, if true, is highly significant. Do you think that there is any reason upon the whole to doubt the truth of the old mans testimony? May he not have well and easily remembered the circumstance in view of the fact that that very night the child was carried away?"

only to aid you in applying the principles of law to the facts as you may find them.

You must not consider what I shall say concerning the evidence as being accurate, but you must depend upon your own recollection.

"You must not only consider the evidence to which I shall refer, but you must consider all of the evidence in the case.

In this, as in every criminal case, the defendant is presumed to be innocent, which presumption continues until he is proved to be guilty.

To suport the indictment and to justify a conviction, the state must prove the facts sufficient for that purpose by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt; and that burden never shifts from the state.

If there be reasonable doubt whether the defendant be guilty, he is to be declared not guilty.

Reasonable doubt is a term often used, probably pretty well understood, but not easily defined.

It is not a mere possible doubt, because everything relating to human affairs and depending on moral evidence is open to some possible or imaginary doubt.

It is that state of the case which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all of the evidence, leaves the minds of the jurors in that condition that they cannot say that they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge.

The evidence must establish the truth of the fact to a moral certainty, a certainty that convinces and directs the understanding and satisfies the reason and judgment of those who are bound to act conscientiously upon it.

But if, after canvassing carefully the evidence, giving the accused the benefit of reasonable doubt, you are led to the conclusion that the defendant is guilty, you should so declare by your verdict.

To make out a case of guilt, the state must establish by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, first, the death of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., as a result of a felonious stroke inflicted on the first day of March, 1932, at the township of East Amwell in this county.

To support that charge the state has produced evidence to the following effect:

The fact of death seems to be proved, and admitted.

At the time of his death the child was about 20 months old in the evening of March 1, 1932, the child was prepared for bed by its mother and its nurse, Betty Gow, at the Lindbergh home in East Amwell Township in this county.

Recalls Noise Heard by Lindy

The evidence is to the effect that the child was then in good health, a normal child except for a slight cold; that the mother and the nurse securely fixed the covering about the child, and about 8 o'clock left the room and closed the window; that between that hour and 10 o'clock the child was removed from the bed by some person and carried away, with the clothing in which it had been put to bed, which clothing has been described to you.

There is evidence from which you may conclude, if you see fit that the person who carried away the child entered the nursery or child's bedroom through the southeast window of the nursery room, by means of a ladder placed against the side of the house, under or near the window, and that this occurred shortly after nine o'clock at night.

You will recall the evidence of Colonel Lindbergh to the effect that as he was sitting in his living room downstairs, he heard a strange noise about that time, the sound of wood on wood, like the striking of two pieces of wood together, like the boards of a crate falling together off of a stand or chair.

Colonel Lindbergh testified that he could not tell at the time where the sound came from, and at the moment he did not think much about it.

Later, at about 10 o'clock, when the disappearance of the child became known, a strange and broken ladder was found, about 60 or 70 feet from the south east window, with indications that it had been used in entering and leaving the window; and also there were the imprints of a man's shoe in the soft ground under or near the window.

Child Stripped at That Spot

Miss Gow and Mrs. Whateley testified that later, about April 1, 1932, they found the thumbguard, which Miss Gow had securely tied to the wrist of the child's sleeping suit when she put him to bed; that they found his thumbguard in the road leading from the Lindbergh home and on the Lindbergh property, with the knot still untied, from which you may possibly conclude that the sleeping suit was stripped off the child at that place.

There is also evidence to the effect that there was a dirty smudge on the bed clothes, and also on the floor of the nursery, leading from the window to the child's crib, and a ransom letter left on the window sill.

Later, the child's dead and decomposed body was found by a colored man in or hard by a shallow grave, not far from the road, a few miles away, in Mercer county.

Dr. Mitchell, who performed the autopsy, testified that the child died of a fractured skull, the result of external violence, that the fracture extended from a point about an inch and a half posterior to the left, it extended forward probably three or four inches, it extended upward, to one of the fontanels, it extended backward around the back of the head; in other words, it was a very extensive fracture.

Fracture When Child Was Seized

He further testified that, in his opinion, death occurred either instantaneous or within a very few minutes following the actual fractural occurrence.

It is the contention of the state that the fracture described by Dr. Mitchell was inflicted upon the child when it was seized and carried out of the nursery window down the ladder and when the ladder broke.

Now, the ladder has been placed in evidence. Its broken condition when found in the yard has been described to you.

The fact that the child's body was found in Mercer County raises a presumption that the death occurred there but that, of course, is a rebuttable presumption, and may be overcome by circumstantial evidence.

In the present case the state contends that the uncontradicted evidence of Colonel Lindbergh and Dr. Mitchell and other evidence justifies the reasonable inference that the felonious stroke occurred in East Amwell township in Hunterdon County, when the child was seized and carried out of the nursery window and down the ladder by the defendant, and that death was instantaneous; and from the evidence you may conclude, if you see fit, that the child was feloniously stricken on the first day of March in the township of East Amwell in this county, and died as a result of that stroke.

Cites Evidence of Ransom Letters

Secondly, the state, in order to justify a verdict of guilty, must establish by the evidence, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the death was caused by the act of the defendant.

The uncontradicted evidence is that the child was left by the mother and the nurse in the nursery, and the window was then closed.

The evidence justifies the inference, if you see fit to draw it, that the window was maliciously opened and the child seized shortly after 9 o'clock that night.

You will, of course, recall the evidence to the effect that almost immediately after it was discovered that the child had been taken from its crib in the nursery, there was found the ransom letter, demanding fifty thousand dollars, on the window sill, on which was placed a peculiar symbol and peculiar punch holes, and stating that directions would later be given for the delivery of the money.

There is also evidence to the effect that a few days later Colonel Lindbergh received a second letter with like symbols, referring to the original ransom letter, and reiterating that directions for the delivery of the ransom money would be given.

Meanwhile, Colonel Breckinridge, the friend and counsellor of Colonel Lindbergh, had identified himself with the case in an endeavor to help his friend.

There is evidence to the effect that a few days before March, 1932, Dr. Condon had inserted an advertisement in the Bronx newspaper in effect offering to act as a go-between; that a few days later Dr. Condon received a letter in effect accepting his offer to act as a go-between and enclosing a letter to Colonel Lindbergh, telling Dr. Condon that after he got the money to put words in the New York American that the money is ready, and the letter to Colonel Lindbergh said Condon may act as go-between, to give him the money, with directions as to the package; and how thereafter the baby was to be found.

This letter to Colonel Lindbergh as I recall the testimony, contained the peculiar symbols of the original ransom letter.

The evidence is to the effect that immediately Dr. Condon drove to Hopewell and conferred with Colonel Lindbergh and with Colonel Breckinridge and, with their acquiescence, he inserted the advertisement, "I accept; money is ready."

Dr. Condon testified that shortly thereafter he received a letter addressed to him, and delivered to him by a taxicab driver, giving him instructions how to proceed.

The taxicab driver testified that he was given that letter by the defendant Hauptmann.

Dr. Condon testified that, as a result of the directions contained in that letter and another letter, he first had, on March 12th, 1932, an interview in Woodlawn Cemetery with a man whom he identified as the defendant, after talking with him for more than an hour

In that interview Dr. Condon said that the defendant, after having run away from the gate, said, among other things:

"It is too dangerous. Might be 20 years or burn. Would I burn if the baby is dead? I am only a go-between."

Dr. Condon also testified in effect that the defendant said that the baby was being held on a boat by others, that "we are the right parties," that the baby was held in the crib by safety pins, and he said that he would send the sleeping suit.

Dr. Condon further testified that later he received the sleeping suit and other letters containing further directions, and finally a letter directing that the money be ready by Saturday night and to put an advertisement in the newspaper "Everything O. K." And that these directions were complied with by him, Condon, with the acquiescence of Colonel Lindbergh and Colonel Breckinridge, the latter of whom had been in close touch with Dr. Condon during practically the whole of the ransome negotiations.

There is testimony to the effect that on this Saturday night, April 2, 1932, there was delivered to Dr. Condon's residence a letter containing further instructions, and that as a result thereof on that evening Col. Lindbergh, who was there waiting, drove Dr. Condon to the entrance of St. Raymond's cemetery with the ransom money; that Dr. Condon alighted and contacted with a man, and after some talk and delay handed him the package containing $50,000 of ransom money, $35,000 of which was in gold certificates, the numbers of which bills had ben taken.

There is evidence to the effect that after Dr. Condon alighted with the money he was hailed by a man on the other side of the hedge, to whom he finally delivered the ransom money.

Must Determine on the Evidence

Colonel Lindbergh testified that the voice that hailed Condon was that of the defendant.

Dr. Condon testified that the man to whom he delivered the money was the defendant.

This is denied by the defendant, and there is other testimony bearing upon the matter, and so that question becomes one for your determination.

What Both Sides Say

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 13—Here is the comment by the chief counsels for prosecution and defense on the charge of Justice Thomas W. Trenchard:

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz:

"It is very comprehensive."

Chief Defense Counsel Edward J. Reilly:

"Justice Trenchard has learned during his long experience to deliver a clear and understandable charge."

It is argued that Dr. Condon's testimony is inherently improbable and should be in part rejected by you, but you will observe that his testimony is corroborated in large part by several witnesses whose credibility has not been impeached in any manner whatsoever.

Of course, if it is in the minds of the jury a reasonable doubt as to the truth of any testimony, such testimony should be rejected but, upon the whole, is there any doubt in your mind as to the reliability of Dr. Condon's testimony?

It is argued that Colonel Lindberg could not have identified that voice, and that it is unlikely that the defendant would have talked with Condon.

"Well, those questions are for the determination of this jury, after having patiently listened to the evidence bearing upon those topics.

Link Symbols With Kidnaper

If you find that the defendant was the man to whom the ransom money was delivered, as a result of the directions in the ransom notes, bearing symbols like those on the original ransom note, the question is pertinent: Was not the defendant the man who left the ransom note on the window sill of the nursery, and who took the child from its crib, after opening the closed window?

It is argued by defendant's counsel that the kidnaping and murder was done by a gang, and not by the defendant, and that the defendant was in nowise concerned therein.

The argument was to the effect that it was done by a gang, with the help or connivance of some one or more servants of the Lindbergh or Morrow households.

Now, do you believe that? Is there any evidence in this case whatsoever to support any such conclusion?

A very important question in the case is: Did the defendant Hauptmann write the original ransom note found on the window sill, and the other ransom notes which followed?

Numerous experts testified, that the defendant Hauptmann wrote every one of the ransom notes, and Mr. Osborne, Senior, said that that conclusion was irrestible, unanswerable and overwhelming.

On the other hand, the defendant denies that he wrote them, and a handwriting expert, called by him, so testified. And so the fact becomes one for determination.

The weight of the evidence to prove the genuineness of handwriting is wholly for the jury.

As bearing upon the question whether or not the defendant was the man to whom was paid the ransom money in the cemetery, you will, of course, consider the evidence to the effect that the defendant had written the address and telephone number of Dr. Condon on the door jamb of his closet; and if you believe that it throws light upon the question whether or not he was dealing with Dr. Condon.

As I have said, the defendant denies that he was the man who was paid the ransom money, and there is other testimony which, if credible and believed by you, supports his statement.

You will consider, as bearing upon that question, the fact that a record of the serial numbers of the ransom money was retained.

Now, does it not appear that many of the ransom bills were traced to the possession of the defendant?

Takes Up Ladder Evidence

Does it not appear that many thousands of dollars of ransom bills were found in his garage, hidden in the walls or under the floor, that others were found on his person when he was arrested, and others passed by him from time to time?

As bearing upon the question whether or not the defendant was the man who took the child and left the ransom letter on the window sill, you should, of course, consider the evidence with respect to the ladder, if you find, as seems likely, that it was used in reaching the nursery.

That the ladder was there seems to be unquestioned.

If it was not there for the purpose of reaching that nursery window, for what purpose was it there?

There is evidence from which you may conclude, if you see fit, that the defendant built the ladder, although he denies it.

Does not the evidence satisfy you that at least a part of the wood from which the ladder was built came out of the flooring of the attic of the defendant?

In this connection you should consider the marks upon the wood, and give the evidence in respect thereton such weight as you think it entitled to, after a consideration of the credibility of the witnesses who testified in respect thereto.

The defendant has offered himself as a witness in his own behalf, and the law makes him a competent witness, notwithstanding his very deep interest in the event of the trial.

Only on His Credit as a Witness

His evidence is not to be rejected merely for the reason that he is interested, but his interest in the result may be taken into consideration by you as an important circumstance upon the question of his credibility, the question whether he is telling the truth.

You should also consder his testimony in view of its inherent probability or improbability, in the light of all of the facts and circumstances as disclosed by the evidence.

It appeared on the examination of the defendant here in court that he has heretofore been convicted of crime. That teestimony may be given consideration by you as affecting his credit as a witness, and for that purpose only.

The defendant denies that he was ever on the Lindbergh premises, denies that he was present at the time that the child was seized and carried away. He testifies that he was in New York at that time.

He denies that he received the ransom money in the cemetery and says that he was at his home at that time on the evening of April 2, 1932.

This mode of meeting a charge of crime is commonly called setting up an alibi.

It is not looked upon with any disfavor in the law, for, whatever evidence tends to prove that the defendant was elsewhere at the time the crime was committed, at the same time tends to contradict the fact that the crime was committed by the defendant, whereas here, the presence of the defendant is essential to guilt, and if a reasonable doubt of guilt is raised, even by inconclusive evidence of an alibi, the defendant is entitled to the benefit of that doubt.

Cites Hochmuth's Testimony

As bearing upon the question of whether or not the defendant was present at the Lindbergh home on March 1, 1932, you, of course, should consider the testimony of Mr. Hocmuth, along with that of other witnesses.

Mr. Hochmuth lives at or about the entrance of the lane that goes up to the Lindbergh house.

He testified that one the fore-

Through the musty old Hunterdon County courtroom the mellow voice of Justice Thomas W. Trenchard echoes as the venerable jurist cautions the "12 men good and true" . . . Democratic Promises

Are They Merely to Get Into Office or to Stay in?

THE Democratic platform of 1932 was carefully read by millions of our people. Its promises and pledges were accepted as sincere and honestly intended.

Not only was public reliance invited by the platform itself, but the leading candidates of the party gave their personal pledges that the promises of the platform would be scrupulously kept.

President Roosevelt declared "The platform is a promise BINDING ON THE PARTY AND ITS CANDIDATES"; and later said:

"I have accepted the platform WITHOUT EQUIVOCATION AND WITHOUT RESERVE."

No feature of the platform did more to attract support to Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy and to instil confidence among thoughtful voters than its pledge of "an immediate and DRASTIC REDUCTION of governmental expenditure" and the elimination of "EXTRAVAGANCE," with the definite promise "to accomplish the saving of not less than 25 PER CENT IN THE COST OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT."

WE recall, in addition to this general pledge, the platform's specific condemnation of "the extravagance of the farm board."

In the President's appeal for support he omitted no opportunity to underwrite and emphasize these pledges.

"Let us have the courage," said he, "TO STOP BORROWING to meet continuing deficits and STOP THE DEFICITS."

And that there could be no mistaking the sincerity and firmness of his purpose, he resorted to homely parallels, which reinforced his pledges and left his meaning in no doubt.

"Any government," said he, "like any family, can spend a little more than it earns. But you and I know that a continuation of that habit MEANS THE POOR-HOUSE."

Fair enough words! But were they words only?

Franklin Roosevelt's illustrious predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, said:

"WORDS ARE GOOD WHEN BACKED BY DEEDS, AND ONLY SO."

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 13—Waiting for the jury.

The tensest moment that can ever happen to any one in life.

Behind closed doors, eight men and four women. Everything is over. The last word has been spoken. None may enter those closed doors, no one may hear what they are saying.

Closed doors.

Behind them the jury debates the fate of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Life? Death?

How does Hauptmann stand it?

How can he possibly draw the next breath, looking ahead from one moment to another, listening with ears strained for the rustle, the throb of a word, the slighest noise of a footstep that will mean—the verdict.

Minutes Endless

Minutes are long—they are endless. They drag like hours across us. You wait and listen, too, and think a long, long time has elapsed and then you look at your watch and it is only five minutes, five little minutes.

If it is like that with us, what must it be for Hauptmann?

The minutes are long to him, yet they may be the very last minutes he is ever to call his life his own.

Any one of these minutes may be the last before he begins that wait which ends in the electric chair, may be the very last he will ever know that are sweetened with hope.

So he must be torn—torn with the dread of that verdict, clinging a very little perhaps to those moments when he can at least still hope, yet tortured so by suspense that even that one word "guilty" which will end the torture is welcome.

He may pray, as the minutes drag by, for even that word, as people in terrible pain pray for death.

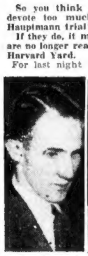
Waiting is one of the forms of hell that human beings must endure. And the waiting of a man for a jury that holds his life in their hands is the top form of ghastly waiting, when time itself instead of a boon and a blessing is a form of anguish.

137 Harvard Boys Think Juror Bruno

So you think the newspapers devote too much space to the Hauptmann trial?

If they do, it must be that they are no longer read in and around Harvard Yard.

For last night no less than 137



BRUNO

out of 234 students identified a picture of Charles F. Snyder, Flemington juror, as that of Bruno himself, the Harvard Crimson announces today.

But look at Synder's picture and you will realize that it was not through ignorance alone. There is enough similarity between Snyder and Hauptmann to give almost anyone pause, especially if handed the juror's picture along with those of a few movie stars as was done in the Harvard experiment.

MALDEN MAN Thought on Macon

Believed among the survivors of the Macon was William Brook, formerly of 430 Charles street, Malden. No word had been received from him today by his brother, Irwin.

Brook enlisted in the Navy in 1917, and has been in flying service for 14 years. He escaped two disasters—including the Akron tragedy—by being in a hospital at the time.

His wife and two daughters are living at Sunnydale, Calif.

BUILDERS ASK Works Bill Change

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Senators Walsh and Coolidge of Massachusetts have been asked by the Building Trades Employers' Association of Boston to propose an amendment to the administration's public works bill to provide that the public works projects be carried out by private architectural, engineering and contracting organizations.

'ALUMNI' Planned by BRUNO JURY

By Associated Press

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 13—A plan for a permanent organization of the Hauptmann jury in order to hold a reunion party once a year will be discussed when the trial ends, Oden Baggstrom, chief jury constable, said today.

"I think they'll be in favor of it," said Baggstrom. "... An organization with a president and secretary, to hold an annual affair and re-enact old times.

"We'd have dinner in the Union Hotel dining room again, behind screens, but with no State troopers."

The oldest juror, Philip Hockenbury, railroad section gang worker, would be 59 when the first reunion takes place, and Mrs. Stockton, the youngest jurywoman, would be 33.

"It wouldn't be hard for them all to come," said Baggstrom. "Most of them live within 20 miles of here."

An idea that has been suggested is to organize the jurors' 22 children as an auxiliary.

MEDFORD FIRM To Raise Death Ship

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—The job of raising and removing the hulk of the Colonial liner, Lexington, from the East River was awarded today to the John Forward Co., of Medford, Mass. Their bid was $23,895.

The Lexington was sunk January 2, with the loss of several lives, after a collision with the freighter, Jane Christensen.

STRIKE VIOLENCE

Worcester, Feb. 13—First violence in a truck drivers' strike, in progress a week, occurred today when three unidentified men set upon three truck drivers in front of a grocery store at 282 Boylston street.

BOTH Exceptions GRANTED

JUDGE ALLOWS TRIAL MOVES

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 13—Both defense and the state took exceptions today to Justice Thomas W. Trenchard's charge to the Hauptmann jury.

Defense Attorney Frederick A. Pope read an exception to a portion of the charge dealing with review of testimony concerning the occurrences on the night the child was kidnaped.

Pope argued that this portion of the charge was so phrased that, to the defense counsel, it did not correspond with the evidence adduced during the trial.

Pope also voiced exception to that section of the charge in which the judge told the jurors the state had adduced evidence to show that the "kidnap ladder" was on the scene solely for the purpose of effecting entrance to the nursery.

Pope held that the judge should not have commented in that fashion.

He also objected to the judge's statement there was sufficient ground to believe the child died at or near the actual kidnaping scene.

The defense, Pope claimed, has questioned whether the death occurred in Hunterdon or Mercer County. He held that the manner in which the court commented upon this point was not consistent with the evidence presented.

Justice Trenchard granted Pope's exception to that portion of his charge dealing with the justice's review of the testimony concerning the occurrences of the night the baby was abducted.

"May I also have an exception to the charge itself?" Pope asked at the conclusion of his specific protests.

"Yes, I think the statute covers that," said the court.

The tenor of the defense protests was that the charge had indicated bias against the defendant.

PWA to Use Granite

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Representative Edith Nourse Rogers of Massachusets said today she had been assured by the Treasury Department that granite would be used to a greater extent in future public works construction.

Judge's Charge to Jury

Over This Table Will Be Decided Hauptmann's Fate

Guilty or innocent? The answer will be reached as Hauptmann's 12 jurors sit in these chairs, around this table in the jury room of the Flemington courthouse. From the time the judge's charge is ended until a verdict is reached, this will be the scene of the jurors' deliberations. (Picture by International News Photograph Service.)

HITS AT Defense CLAIMS

noon of that day, March 1, 1932, he saw the defendant at that point, driving rapidly from the direction of Hopewell; that he got in the ditch or dangerously near the ditch and that he had a ladder in the car, which car was a dirty green.

This testimony, if true, is highly significant. Do you think that there is any reason upon the whole to doubt the truth of the old man's testimony?

May he not have well and easily remembered the circumstances, in view of the fact that that very night the child was carried away?

The defendant, as I have said, denies that he was there or ever in the neighborhood.

But, as bearing upon that question, you should consider the testimony of other witnesses, that the defendant was seen in the neighborhood not long before March 1st, 1932, and give it such weight as you think it is entitled to, after considering the credibility of the witnesses, as disclosed by the evidence.

Tells Them to Weigh Alibi

The defendant has produced some testimony, besides his own, that he was in New York on the day and evening of March 1st, 1932, and some testimony besides his own, that on the evening of April 2nd, 1932, when the ransom money was delivered, he was at his home.

This testimony produced by the defendant I shall not attempt to recite in greater detail.

It should be given consideration by you and given such weight as you think it is entitled to, after considering it in connection with all of the other evidence in the case, bearing upon these questions and all other questions in the case, determination of which would tend to throw light upon the case.

You should consider the fact, where it is the fact, that several of the witnesses have been convicted of crime, and to determine whether or not their credibility has been affected thereby; and where it appears that witnesses have made contradictory statements, you should consider that fact and determine their credibility as affected thereby.

The evidence produced by the state is largely circumstantial in character.

In order to justify the conviction of the defendant upon circumstantial evidence, it is necessary not only that all of the circumstances concur to show that he committed the crime charged, but that they are inconsistent with any other rational conclusion.

It is not sufficient that the circumstances proved coincide with, account for and therefore render probable the hypothesis that is sought to be established by the prosecution.

They must exclude to a moral certainty every other hypothesis, but the single one of guilt, and if they do not do this, the jury should find the defendant not guilty.

Acquit if Doubt Is Reasonable

And when the case against the defendant is made up wholly of a chain of circumstances, and there is reasonable doubt as to any fact, the existence of which is essential to establish guilt, the defendant should be acquitted.

But the crime of murder is not one which is always committed in the presence of witnesses, and if not so committed, it must be established by circumstantial evidence or not at all.

And where the essential facts and circumstances are proved, which cannot be explained upon any other theory than that the defendant is guilty of the crime charged against him, such evidence should be considered as satisfactory and convincing as that of the most direct and positive character.

If the state has not satisfied you by evidence beyond a reasonable doubt that the death of the child was caused by the act of the defendant, he must be acquitted.

But if, on the other hand, the state has satisfied you beyond a reasonable doubt that the child's death was caused by the unlawful and criminal act of the defendant while stealing and carrying away the child and its clothing, of which unlawful act against the peace of the state, the probable consequences might be bloodshed, it is murder, and if murder, the degree thereof must then be determined.

Now, our statute declares, among other things: Murder, which shall be committed in perpetrating, or attempting to perpetrate any burglary, shall be murder in the first degree.

The sate contends that the murder in this case was committed in perpetrating a burgary, and is murder in the first degree.

I charge you that if murder was committed in perpetrating a burglary, it is murder in the first degree, without reference to the question whether such killing was wilful or unintentional; and I further charge you, as requested by the defendant, that in order to convict this defendant you must be satisfied, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the death of the child ensued from committing, or attempting to commit, burglary, at or about the time and place in question.

Our statute relating to burglary says:

"Any person who shall by night wilfully or maliciously break and enter any dwelling house with intent to steal and commit a battery shall be guilty o a high misdemeanor."

If, therefore, the defendant by night wilfully and maliciously broke and entered the Lindbergh dwelling house with intent to steal the child and its clothing and to commit a battery on the child, he committed a burglary; and if the murder was committed in perpetrating a burglary, it is murder in the first degree.

Evidence of Kidnap Night

In the circumstances of this case you must be satisfied that the window was shut and that it was raised and opened by the defendant and that he entered the house.

There is evidence from which you may conclude, if you see fit, that the defendant feloniously, wilfully and maliciously broke and entered the dwelling house of Colonel Lindbergh in the night time with intent to steal the child and its clothing and commit a battery upon the child.

That the defendant brought the ladder to the Lindbergh house in East Hopewell township in this county, and placed it up against the house near the nursery window, shortly after 9 o'clock at night he ascended the ladder maliciously and wilfully, opened the closed window and entered the nursery room.

That he seized the child and its clothing and carried it out of the nursery room window, and that fracture of the skull which caused the child's death was inflicted when the child was seized by the defendant and carried out and down the ladder, and when the ladder broke.

Defines Three Verdicts

If you find that the murder was committed by the defendant in perpetrating a burglary, it is murder in the first degree, even though the killing was unintentional.

If there is a reasonable doubt that the murder was committed by the defendant in perpetrating a burglary, he must be acquitted.

I am requested to charge, and do charge, that each juror must reach his own judgment, after discussion of the facts with his fellow jurors.

If you find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, you may, if you see fit, by your verdict, and as a part thereof, recommend imprisonment at hard labor for life.

If you should return a verdict of murder in the first degree and nothing else, the punishment which would be inflicted on that verdict would be death.

If you desire to return a verdict of murder in the first degree, coupled with imprisonment for life, then you must so put it in your verdict, because the law reads that every person convicted of murder in the first degree, its aiders, abettors, counselors and procurers, shall suffer death unless the jury shall, by their verdict and as a part thereof, upon and after consideration of all the evidence, recommend imprisonment at hard labor for life, in which case this and no greater punishment shall be imposed.

The clerk may swear these constables to safely keep the jury until they have agreed upon their verdict.

CURLEY SWINGS Axe on Jones

Governor Curley swung the axe today at another of ex-Governor Ely's eleventh hour appointees.

The Governor informed the commissioners of labor and industry that ex-Representative John A. Jones, of Peabody, as director of the department's division of employment, is not satisfactory to the federal administration.

Jones, who campaigned for Cole, was appointed to the job, at $3460 a year, after his own defeat in the last election.

From Ireland comes Jack Doyle, via Mayfair, London, six feet four, handsome face, nice smile, big muscles, telling the truth about himself, whatever the damage to his modesty: "I am not like the usual lowbrow fighter...I'll go up and up and up, to the very top."

Mr. Doyle sings "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" very sweetly. Mr. Max Baer, at present prize fight champion, cannot sing well, but he, too, has self confidence: "Jack Doyle's prophecies are all very well. He may go 'up and up and up' but sooner or later, on the road up, he will meet me, and then he will go down, and down and down."

Two Palestine-owned ships, the Mount Zion and Tel Aviv, have started regular sailings that will connect Palestine, Constanza and Trieste. This is an intelligent step, passenger service to Palestine being heavy.

Sailing the seas is nothing new for people of the Jewish race. The first navigators that ever ventured out of sight of land, without a compass, were Phoenicians, daring Semitic navigators from the eastern end of the Mediterranean. They sailed out through the Straits of Gibraltar into the Atlantic to develop the tin mines of England. It should be remembered also that Christopher Columbus was probably of Spanish-Jewish ancestry.

The Washington SIDESHOW

When a professional politician becomes an amateur philatelist there is danger of his becoming a professional philatelist and an amateur politician.

Jim Farley is just an amateur philatelist, but those unperforated, ungummed, autographed first editions are sticking to him like nobody's business.

To a post office a block of those stamps is worth $6.00; to a collector, thousands of dollars; to a politician, millions of votes, maybe.—Isn't philately wonderful?

Washington, Feb. 13—It isn't really a revolt in the Senate against the President on the amazing $4,880,000,000 relief and works bill. It's a rescue expedition that's under way, if the truth must be told. And this in all seriousness.

Clearly the senators who are opposing the breath-taking grant of power to the President under the provisions of this unprecedented measure do not consider themselves to be in a state of rebellion. Rather they are assuming that they, having leisure to look over the bill suddenly shot at them by the House after a few hours of gagged debate, should protect the President from some obviously hastily drawn provisions.

Torn to Pieces

Certainly it is not in any spirit of hostility to the President that the bill was torn to pieces in the Senate committee. It so happens senators are not unmindful of the fact that his bill did not come from the hand of the President. Indeed, Mr. Roosevelt made it clear to the correspondents at a White House conference, after the bill had actually reached the Capito', that he had not read it!

This being the case, and it appearing further the actual authorship is still so shrouded in mystery that to this day the statesmen at the Capitol haven't discovered who wrote it, senators have come to feel that the bill is a piece-work job, thrown together with concern only for conferring certain great powers upon the President, but without due regard being given as to where those powers actually would lead.

Hence senators feel they are really doing the President a good turn by re-writing the bill. This altruism may develop to a greater extent when the bill reaches the floor of the Senate. Queerly enough, this accurately reflects the Senate's state of mind today.

Bruno Feared Burns Would Shoot Him

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Feb. 13—Unshaken and arrogantly boastful, Bruno Richard Hauptmann came into court today and contemptuously ridiculed the case against him.

"I was more disturbed by that minister's outbreak in court than I was by Attorney General Wilentz' summation," the Bronx carpenter told Edward J. Reilly, his chief of defense.

"Mr. Reilly, Wilentz only told that jury what he thought. He told them his opinion—one man's guess. He did not state the facts. He told only what he thought. I am sure the jury will not believe that."

Reilly, crooking a ponderous arm over the ex-machine gunner's shriveled shoulders, asked why Rev. Vincent Burns' sudden, hysterical shout had frightened him.

"I tell you," said the prisoner, "when that minister started to yell, I figured out, maybe it was a man who was going to shoot me.

WORK BILL Sent to Senate BY COMMITTEE

By International News Service

Washington, Feb. 13—After scoring three victories for President Roosevelt, the Senate appropriations committee this afternoon favorably reported the administration's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill with a slight concession to organized labor on the "prevailing wage" issue.

As reported, the bill carried a new section, directing the President to pay the "prevailing rate of wages" on any project if the proposed "sustenance wages" arefound to be "affecting adversely" the prevailing wages in the vicinity.

This substitute for the American Federation of Labor's demand that "prevailing rates of wages" be paid on all relief projects, proved unacceptable to labor leaders. The fight on this issue will be carried to the floor of the Senate.

JURY BOARD Asked by Bar

Creation of a jury commission to supervise the selection of jurors in every city and town in the state was urged today by Attorney Bentley W. Warren, president of the Boston Bar Association, at a hearnig before the joint committee on judiciary.

The chief justice of the Superior Court would make the appointments and fix the salaries under the provisions of the petition filed by the association.

ITALY War Plans BARED

2-YEAR DRIVE IN ETHIOPIA

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Rome, Feb. 13 — The Italian government was said authoritatively today to be ready to spend $850,000,000 on a two-year's military campaign in Africa in the event hostilities break out with Ethiopia.

The Italian military plans became known as Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian charge d'affaires, handed Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary of foreign affairs, Emperor Haile Selassie's defiant retort holding Italy responsible for the frontier conflicts which precipitated the present crisis.

The Ethiopian communication, a government spokesman said, created a "serious situation." He described as undiplomatic proceure the action of the Ethiopian envoy in making his sovereign's message public before it had been presented to the Italian government.

It was learned Italy is recruiting 5000 physicians for colonial service. A battalion of 300 Fascist militia left Rome for Sicily at 7 a. m. with full colonial equipment.

The militia marched to the railroad station by a circuitous route, skirting the main streets. Every effort is being made to keep the troop movements from disturbing the capital.

The only information on the crisis published so far in Italian newspapers has been two government communiques Monday, one announcing the mobilization and the other the skirmish at Afdub.

They have also carried accounts of favorable reactions in London, Paris and Geneva to the Italian stand.

General Rudolfo Graziani, former Governor of Cirenaica, is now at Massaua, capital of Eritrea, as a member of the staff of General Emilio de Bono, high commissioner for the colony. It was considered likely he would comand any military expedition into Ethiopia.

General Graziani was in charge of the Italian forces which suppressed a native rebellion in Cerenaica.

London, Feb. 13 (AP)—Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, told the House of Commons today that Italy has assured Great Britain she has no intention to "abandon efforts to seek an amicable settlement by direct negotiation" of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Sir John told the lawmakers that Sir Sidney Barton, British minister to Ethiopia, had "been authorized to use his good offices in promoting the success" of the Italo-Ethiopian negotiations at Addis Ababa, the capital of the African empire.

Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, Feb. 13—The Ethiopian and Italian governments agreed today to the establishment of a neutral zone where hostilities recently have occurred and to appoint a boundary commission.

The agreement was reached by representatives of the two nations after several days of intensive debates.

First reports of the understanding said a commission to be appointed would investigate the situation which has arisen between Ethiopia and Italy over the boundaries of this empire and the Italian colonies of Somaliland and Eritrea and would attempt to end the boundary dispute.

TURNER MAKES Speedy Flight

Newark, N. J., Feb. 13 (INS)—Colonel Roscoe Turner chalked up another feat early today when he landed at Newark airport after flying non-stop from Chicago in a Boeing low-wing transport monoplane in three and one-half hours to test gas consumption under average conditions. Mrs. Turner, Miss Marjorie Cleare, Don Young and W. R. Allemang accompanied Turner.

WILEY TELLS HOW MACON CRASHED

Bag Burst, He Says

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

San Francisco, Feb. 13 — The giant dirigible Macon, destroyed by a sudden mysterious disaster, lay at the bottom of the Pacific Ocean today, while 81 survivors were being brought into San Francisco Bay by cruisers of the United States fleet.

Only two members of the crew were missing.

The tragic fate of every American-made giant dirigible the navy has possessed overtook the queen of the skies as she neared her Sunnyvale base at sunset last night.

One of her 12 gas cells suddenly burst as she sped through squally air and fog 110 miles south of San Francisco.

The craft nosed abruptly skyward and the immediate efforts of Lieut. Commander Herbert V. Wiley, skipper of the Macon and survivor of the Akron and Shenandoah disasters, to balance the ship proved futile.

Under his orders the unmanageable dirigible landed, stern first on the water 10 miles off Point Sur.

She sank almost immediately but her crew had taken to rubber lifeboats and all but two men were picked up by the cruisers Richmond, Concord and Cincinnati.

The exact fate of the two missing men—Radioman Ernest Dailey, of North Bend, Ore., and Florentino Edquiba, Filipino mess sergeant—like the cause of the bursting cells, was not determined.

Dailey presumably broke his back in a 125-foot leap from the ship before it landed. Edquiba was last seen aboard.

Two Injured

Two injured men will be taken off the rescue cruisers by ambulances, although their hurts are not serious.

Sunk in 250 fathoms the wrecked dirigible was a total loss. The navy contemplated no salvage plans.

The exact cause of the disaster apparently was not known by the naval officers themselves.

Rear Admiral C. E. Courtney of the crusier Richmond, which picked up 64 survivors, said the number 9 gas cell had burst. Earlier, Commander Wiley had said it was cells 1 and 2.

Wiley's story of the crash follows:

"While off Pt. Sur, a casualty occurred in stern.

"I though elevator control carried away. Ship took a bow up inclination, rose rapidly.

"Ordered all ballast and fuel slip tanks dropped aft of midship. Received prompt word No. 1 gas cell under fins was gone and stern was crumbling and finally that No. 2 cell was gone.

"Tried to land ship near cruisers off Point Sur, but could not see surface until shortly before landing.

"The ship landed stern first. All hands took to rubber boats and saw ship finally sink. Discipline excellent and all hands had alarm in time to don life jackets."

The lighthouse keeper at Point Sur told of seeing the airship suddenly sink and then rise rapidly and disappear from sight.

Only One S O S

Simultaneously Wiley sent out his S O S reporting the ship was "falling."

Naval craft and scores of other boats headed at once for the Macon's position, and Admiral J. M. Reeves, commanding the fleet maneuvers, took charge of all air lines.

Three ships breaking from the column of cruisers quickly picked up the 81 survivors. The Richmond took aboard 64, the Concord 11 and the Cincinnati six.

President Roosevelt, as soon as he heard of the disaster, phoned the naval communications headquarters to obtain first hand information of the Macon's casualty.

The Chief Executive was known to be relieved that the casualty list, if any, would be small.

Hardly had reports of the disaster reached the capital than congressional leaders intimated the tragedy might provide the answer—"No!"—to the question of the practicability of lighter-than-air craft for naval scouting purposes.

The Macon crash probably has sounded the "death knell" of airships for the navy, unless investigation should uncover something not at first apparent, asserted Representative Vinson (D.) of Georgia, chairman of the House naval affairs committee.

Representative Sirovich, chairman of the House patents committee, announced the present inquiry into purported industrial control of patents would be broadened in scope to include an investigation of the Macon crash.

At Akron, O., P. W. Litchfield, president of the Goodyear Zeppelin Corporation, which constructed the Macon, offered "every resource" of the company to aid the government in its endeavor to determine what caused the airship to fall.

At Washington, Mrs. W. A. Moffett, widow of Admiral Moffett, who was lost in the Akron disaster, was shocked when she heard the Macon had fallen.

Mrs. Moffett christened the Macon at Akron, O., March 11, 1933.

It was Lieutenant-Commander Wiley's second close escape from death in a disaster to a huge navy dirigible.

Wreckage and his ability as a swimmer were credited with his being among the three survivors of the Akron disaster.

Commander Wiley's previous experience and his intimate knowledge of lighter-than-air craft doubtless played a large part in preventing a heavy loss of life last night.

10 N. E. Boys Escape in Air Wreck

Six Massachusetts men, three of whom hail from Greater Boston, were among the crew of the U. S. S. Macon rescued today.

Four others, including Lieutenant Commander H. V. Wiley, are from other New England states. The commander's home is in New London, Ct.

For William Frank Germain, of Oxford, enlisted man, it was the second time he escaped death.

Germain was a member of the crew of the ill-fated sister ship Akron.

Fortune was kind to him again today, as it was to Edward Ross Morris of Waltham, James C. Gillmore of Newton, Edmund G. Hopmer of Roslindale, Edmund J. Kolazyk of Fitchburg and John F. Leonard of Fall River.

Homer, the Roslindale man, is one of the youngest of the crew. He is 21. His home is in Granfield street and the youth enlisted four years ago.

Kolazyk, an engineman, is 22 and the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kolazyk of Middle street lane, Fitchburg.

Other New Englanders included Chief Machinist Emmett C. Thurman of Kittery and Warren A. Thompson of Norway, both Maine, and Leonard E. Lehtonen of Branford, Ct.

BONUS

Warning by ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—Fresh notice was given indirectly by President Roosevelt today that if Congress votes for full prepayment of the soldiers' bonus it must provide the money.

This was done in a statement approving restoration of full pay to government employes on April 1—instead of July 1 as he originally recommended. Salaries were cut 15 per cent but 10 per cent already has been returned.

"It should be noted," he added, "that this sum was not contained in the budget estimates and that consideration should properly be given to methods by which government revenues can be increased to meet this and any other new appropriations which tend to throw the regular budget out of balance."

World's Richest Girl Weds

Romance and wealth went hand-in-hand today as Doris Duke, 22, heiress to tobacco millions, wed banker and Social Registerite "Jimmy" H. R. Cromwell. It is the world's richest girl's first matrimonial venture. "Jimmy" is 38, divorced and a father. The couple were united by Supreme Court Justice Humphries in New York. Photo was made at a pre-wedding party. (Picture by International News Photograph Service.)

Winant to Speak

The Massachusetts Civic League wil hear Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire speak on "State Government—Your Government," at its annual meeting next Tuesday. The meeting will be at noon, in the Twentieth Century Club. Governor Winant has been frequently referred to as a possible Republican presidential candidate.

WOMAN, 74 To Wed Chinese

Lee said the ceremony would take place next Monday afternoon at his home in Lyman street, West End.

DORIS DUKE WEDS DIVORCED BANKER

2 Fortunes United

By International News Service

New York, Feb. 13—Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, and "Jimmy" H. R. Cromwell, banker, and economist, were married here today after a romance of many months.

The ceremony took place in the presence of the bride's mother, Mrs. James B. Duke, and the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury.

Supreme Court Justice Humphries officiated.

The couple sailed at noon on a honeymoon trip aboard the Conte di Savoia for Gibraltar and Italian ports.

The bride is 22. This is her first marriage. Cromwell is 37 and formerly was married to Delphine Dodge, the automobile heiress, who now is the wife of Raymond T. Baker.

He has a 9-year-old daughter, Christine Cromwell, whose custody was awarded to his former wife.

Richest Bride

Doris Duke is the world's richest bride.

Fifteen months ago she inherited approximately 10,000,000 from the estate of her father, the late James Buchanan Duke, who founded his fortune in North Carolina tobacco and increased it in the world's money marts.

That ten million was only a third of her inheritance. She will get another $10,000,000 when she becomes 25, a third $10,000,$ at 30.

Then, if there is anything left, she gets that.

"Jimmy" Bares Story of Romance, Riches

New York, Feb. 13 (INS)—The story of the romance between Doris Duke and "Jimmy" R. Cromwell, a tale for which the world has made a thousand plots this past year, finally was told today by "Jimmy" himself.

"We never have been engaged," he said. "We don't believe in engagements.

"Our romance started six years ago at Bar Harbor.

"I guess you could call it love at first sight."

HITLER

Seeks Austrian PLEBISCITE

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Berlin, Feb. 13—German officials said today that Reischfuehrer Hitler would ask the allied powers for a plebiscite in Austria to determine whether that nation desires to join Germany as a condition to Germany's agreement to a pact guaranteeing non-intervention in Austria.

These authorities stated that Hitler would refuse the Franco-British suggestion regarding non-intervention in Austria, unless the other powers adhered to "a plebiscite to give the Austrian people a chance to decide whether thely want to join Germany, or to remain independent."

Te German Government was also represented as being ready to accept "an" aviation pact, but that such a pact must give Germany a fleet capable of competing with that of Soviet Russia.

STATE BODY Favors Beaupre

Re-instantment of Charles T. Beaupre as captain and executive officer of the uniformed branch of the state police advanced today when the legislative committee on public safety voted to report a bill directing his re-employmet by the state commissioner of public safety. A poll reveale 10 of the 11 members in favor of re-instatement, with the attitude of Senator Theodore R. Plunkett of Adams yet to be learned.

Beaupre resigned in 1933 after he had been before a trial board on charges. This board exoriorated him.

ITALIAN Roads Now FINEST

IDLE BUILDING SUPER SYSTEM

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service
Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1935, International News Service

Rome, Feb. 13—"Give us bigger and worse depressions" might be the prayer of the Italian motorist for today Italy is one of the few countries in the world which will come out of the depression with a definite profit in one important category of national wealth.

News of importance has been accumulating gradually in this country for six years. It has been generally overlooked because it grew so imperceptibly.

Today the news has grown up. Italy has in the last six years with the labor of otherwise jobless men leaped a gap of a hundred years.

At one bound she has jumped from bottom of the class of European nations to the front rank in respect of roads.

She has given work to 100,000 men. She has given herself a permanent national asset.

Her example has already inspired Germany and England to go and do likewise.

Six years ago Mussolini announced his program of road-building to combat unemployment.

Road-building was old as mankind. It was a bore.

Today to this Fascist country delegations come from democratic England and from Nazi Germany to study and admire the truly instructive results of Mussolini's six years of road-building.

Imagine a country the size of Italy which six years ago did not possess 300 miles of road good enough to permit motorists to drive at 50 miles an hour.

Over 6000 Today

Today this country has over 6000 miles of roads which permit a comfortable and sustained speed of more than 50 miles an hour.

Today it has over 1000 miles of speedways whereon motorists have driven at an average speed of nearly 70 miles an hour all the way from the northern border of Italy to Rome.

Her jobless did it for her.

Before they went to work Italy had slipped back from the proud position held by the Roman Empire in ancient times as the nation with the best roads in the world to the booby place with almost the worst roads of any great country.

Caesar once traveled in a hired carriage 800 miles from Rhone to Rome in eight days.

That record was never beaten with horses in modern times. Ludwig Friedlaender has reckoned that a rich Roman of the empire could set onu ton a tour and travel 1824

When Mussolini's state road board, the so-called Azienda Autonoma Statale della Strada, took over the state roads in 1928 there were 12,500 miles of state roads in Italy, but only 300 miles of them were fit for modern motor traffic.

Besides these there were about 75,000 miles of country roads, unsurfaced and suitable chiefly for mule carts.

But Mussolini is a motorist. He loves fast driving. He likes above all to speed on a motorcycle.

And Mussolini in 1928 was already worried about Italy's unemployment.

Mussolini's reflections were simple. Should he let the unemployed starve? The answer was no.

Should he put them on a dole, as in England, and feed them for nothing? For a thrifty Italian the answer was no.

Should he give them work? Yes, but what kind?

Caesar's Remedy

Mussolini's answer was the same as that of his great predecessor, Caesar, when Caesar had to find work for Rome's surplus of slaves.

Roads was the answer and Mussolini's first road crew went to work 50,000 strong in 1928.

By now the number of men employed at road building has risen to around 120,000.

In six years this Italian army of road builders has built 6000 miles of broad, level motor highways.

They have surfaced the roads with especial regard for allaying the dust which is such a plague in the southern country.

They have planted over half a million trees along roads 2500 miles in length.

They have erected around 300 provincial road houses for the convenience of motorists.

Finally, they have put a large part of the 75,000 miles of country roads in such good order that it is possible to use them for automobile traffic.

This is not all.

By a system of concessions Mussolini induced private capital to build another special set of speedways which have no parallel in Europe and will not have a rival on this continent until the German system, modeled on the Italian, is completed.

Since Mussolini's road building program began motor traffic in Italy has doubled, despite depression.

Today the program has just gotten well under way.

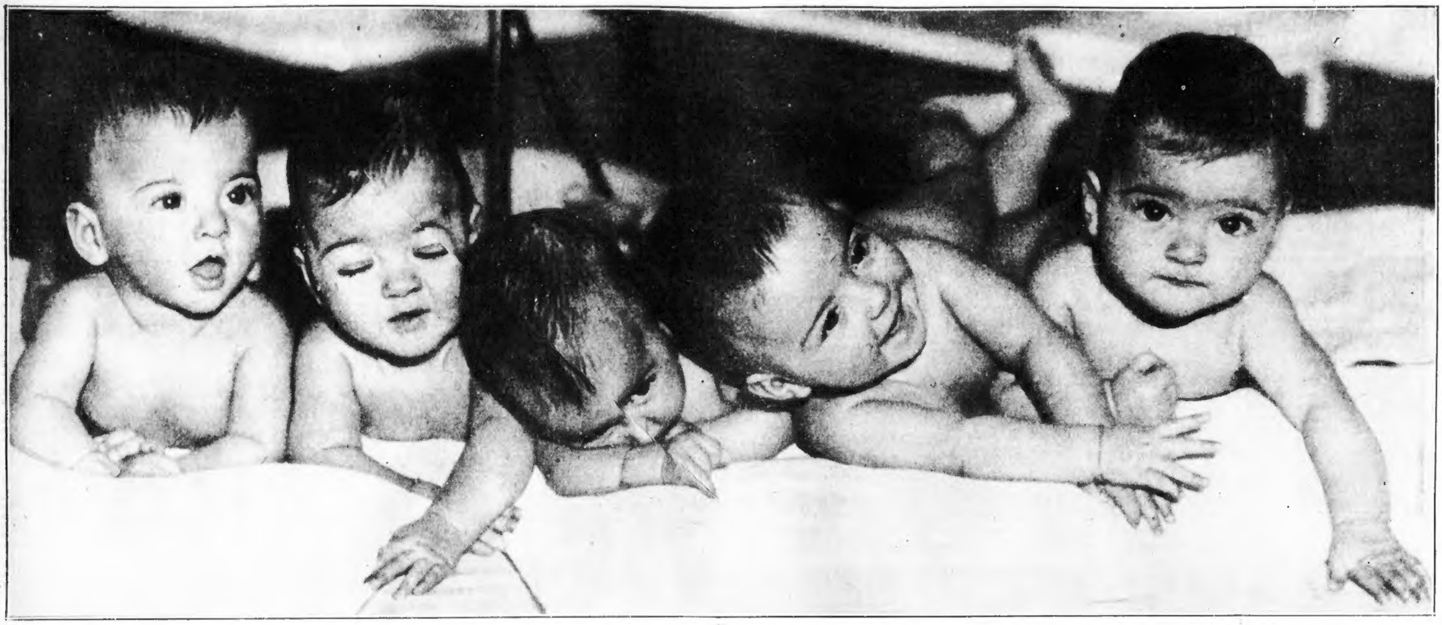
SPOONS---AND SPOONING---NOW INTEREST DIONNE 'QUINS'



STUDY IN PERSONALITIES—They aren't "peas in a pod" any longer! Not a bit of it! Even the little name bracelets that identify one Dionne quintuplet from the others are hardly necessary now. See open-mouthed Emilie, she of the inquiring mind, intent on discovering what this is all about; drowsy Cecile, bored with the world; coquettish Marie, peeking over her arm; Annette, the tomboy, wriggling in sheer joy of living, and Yvonne, bright-eyed and serious.

READY TO START SPOONING—It'll be just too bad for masculine pulse rates when Annette Dionne learns to use those saucer eyes of hers for other than purely utilitarian purposes. And speaking of spooning, Annette's ready to try it—with one of these silver baby spoons, gifts from one of the quintuplets' many well-wishers. Feed herself? Well, Annette guesses so!

ROVING EYES—Not even her bottle of milk can keep the full attention of alert little Marie Dionne. Neither is her old friend, Dr. Alan M. Dafoe, who's her big interest just at present. Marie wants to know what this cameraman is doing. She won't be satisfied until she finds out. Perhaps Marie is wondering where mother and daddy disappeared to all of a sudden. Well, Marie, you can't hog the whole show. They, too, would like to share in some of the applause. The famous parents are making a stage tour in the United States.

Impressive List

THE LIST OF SUBSCRIBERS for her first appearance in this city is indeed impressive, socially as well as numerically . . .at the risk of sounding like a recitation of the names from the pages of the social register we would like to mention some of Boston's most devoted patrons of music who will be seen in Symphony Hall on Saturday paying homage to this wonder child . . .

Mrs. William B. Castle, Mrs. Charles A. Proctor, Mrs. Thomas Barbour, Mrs. Calvin G. Page, Mrs. Winthrop Trowbridge, Mrs. Eliot Spalding, Mrs. George C. Lee, Mrs. Samuel Eliot, Mrs. John C. Lee, Mrs. Francis W. Bird, Mrs. Charles F. Weed, Mrs. Phineas W. Sprague, Mrs. Herman M. Burr, Mrs. George T. West, Mrs. Samuel Hoar, Mrs. Frederick T. Moseley, Mrs. Roger B. Merriman, Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth, Mrs. G. A. Lowell Blake, Mrs. William Copeland, Mrs. Henry G. Bradlee and Mrs. Alexander Steinert, who with her composer husband commands prestige in social-musical circles . . .

Others who will acclaim little Miss Ruth, are Mrs. Harold T. Barnet, Mrs. Andre Morize, Mrs. David Cheever, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, Mrs. Richard D. Fay, Mrs. George B. Dabney, Mrs. Eben T. Doolittle, Mrs. Charles Jackson, Mrs. James Bayer, Mrs. Randolph M. Appleton, Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, Mrs. Henry B. Day, Mrs. Charles A. Kidder, Mrs. Alexander Henderson, Mrs. Frederick T. Pratt, Mrs. John W. Bartol, Mrs. Lewis T. Prouty, Mrs. George B. Baker, Mrs. Arthur Williams, Mrs. James M. Newell, Mrs. Charles G. Weld, Mrs. William McElwain, Mrs. Horace Soule, Mrs. Ralph A. Pope, Mrs. Henry N. Pratt, Mrs. J. Lothrop Motley, Mrs. Julian T. Leonard, Mrs. Stuart C. Rand, Mrs. George W. Wightman, Mrs. George Hawley, Mrs. Frederick P. Royce, Mrs. Walter M. Cabot, Mrs. Bernard W. Trafford, Mrs. Weston Howland, Mrs. Charles R. Adams, Mrs. Percival Lombard and Mrs. George A. Hall . . .

Hundreds of Others

OTHERS ENJOYING the concert from prominent vantage points will be Mrs. Harold C. Sears, Mrs. Charles W. Whittier, Mrs. Alvin F. Sortwell, Mrs. Robert W. Sayles, Mrs. James C. Baldwin, Mrs. Andrew Adie, Mrs. Frank Spinney, Mrs. Henry I. Bowditch, Mrs. Samuel B. Warner, Mrs. Charles B. Kidder, Mrs. Frederick G. Hall, Mrs. Sewall Cabot, Mrs. William York Peters, Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Mrs. John Gardner Coolidge and Mrs. Homer Albers . . .

There are hundreds of other subscribers but these are enough to prove that Mrs. Malcolm B. Stone and her corps of assistants have reaped rewards for their efforts in sponsoring this concert by signing up Cabots, Frothinghams and Coolidges, as well as so many other first family music lovers . . .

Even such sartorially elegant ladies as Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller and Mrs. Paul Clark, whose furs draw sighs of admiration from the audience at the Morning Musicales, were impressed with the individuality and beauty of the beaver cape, muff and turban which Mrs. Robert Steinert wore with a brown woolen dress yesterday afternoon . . .

Crittenton League Entertained

Pouring tea to members of the Boston Circle of the Florence Crittenton League in Mrs. Fuller's mahogany paneled dining room was the occasion for Mrs. Steinert's dressing up in her smartest outfit . . . However, tea was only incidental to the panorama of the Charles river at twilight as viewed from the large windows of the dining room, and so many guests were entranced by the view that even a peek out was at a premium . . .

Loyal members of the Crittenton League who attended this meeting, which was primarily to enlighten them on the subject of Germany, had some moments of trepidation as dissenting views on the situation in that uncertain country were forthcoming at the end of Mr. Howard Pierce Davis' lecture . . .

Mrs. Charles E. Bacon, president of the Boston Circle, presided with the hostess . . . An emerald and diamond bracelet and ring made a perfect ensemble with Mrs. Fuller's velvet dinner gown of the same green hue . . . Mrs. Wilbur Grant and Mrs. Horace Morison who share several interests in common, the Christopher Shop and Peterboro, were among those interested in the discussion as were Mrs. Malcolm B. French, Mrs. William Eaton, Mrs. E. Fred Cullen, Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott, Mrs. John O'Day, Mrs. Walter I. Badger, Mrs. Franklin Hobbs, Mrs. Paul Killiam, Mrs. Geoffrey Whitney . . .

An inseparable trio of Marys, the Misses Fuller, Morrison and Hastings, assisted in serving tiny sandwiches and cakes . . .

Debutante Silhouettes

NUMBER TWELVE

WE can tell you many, many interesting things about this lovely post-debutante, who lives in Weston.

The most interesting thing is that she has a twin sister who is as lovely and as interesting as herself.

She has many talents. She sings a little, is quite a caricaturist, studies French, and dances and plays golf unusually well.

Miss S. B. Betty Alden will send you the original drawing of your silhouette if you would care to have it.

Guide to New Books

By Miles Alden

PERSONAL HISTORY—By Vincent Sheean—Doubleday, Doran and Company.

They always called him Jimmy in the newspaper fraternity, and he sent a news cablegram in the summer of 1929 which he swore would be his last. He was that disgusted—so he declared warmly—with the newspaper game. But 1929 is less than six years away and the smell of the ink and the sound of the strife may again imbue him.

At any rate, this is Jimmy Sheean's own personal book, and in it he lays bare some of the adventures and philosophizes and sometimes waxes warm in the matter of his experiences with persons, places and things during a career which could be called nothing less than exciting.

Jimmy's last news cable was sent from Jerusalem during the battling between Arabs and Jews—and with a mere 200 killed and 500 wounded, the author appears to have been more moved than in the more virile years in the Riff.

But the Jerusalem incident is only a small bit of the interest in this entrancing volume, much though it may mean to Jimmy Sheean.

Between the pages are a crowded life and included are a few passages from his own emotional surge—which may or not give you an inkling as to his views in the Jerusalem salient. Referred to is his experience with love, his flight from Jewish fraternities and his later meeting with an American Jewess.

But "Personal History" is best read at first hand. It is all there and it is enjoyable, and frequently enthralling.

LOVE DENIED

Sharlene Is Warned By Julie

CHAPTER 27

Stuart threw the slashed canvas into the closet, and set up a fresh one. Rapidly he sketched in a figure, just to make Lucien think he had been working. He despised himself for the subterfuge.

Julie was looking sleek and well-dressed and very, very pretty in her smart travelling togs. She hurled herself into Stuart's arms and hugged him madly.

He lifted her tiny form off the floor and kissed her, whereat she threatened to spoil her makeup by moistening the mascara on her eyelashes with happy tears.

"Julie! You're getting to be a great success! I see your name in the movie news—"

"This is my fourth featured part, Stuart! Isn't it swell?"

"They may star her," observed Lucien, with satisfaction. "And I discovered the brat—don't forget that!"

"Let me look at you, darling." She turned Stuart about to the relentless light of the big north window. "You're thin. And you never used to have smudges under your eyes. High life, eh? Well, I've got to starve now, worse than we used to . Got to keep the figure."

She twirled about before Stuart and then ran her hands over her firm little figure. "Not too fat, now, eh, Stuart?"

Lucien glanced quickly toward the open door. "Where's Sharlene?"

"She's out this afternoon. Oh, here comes the beer. Thank you, Brooks."

"Beer! Oh, chawning, chawning!" burlesqued Julie and drank greedily.

Lucien strolled over to the canvas. "What have we here, Stuart?"

"Ah—something I was just starting. You'll have to watch it grow."

"H'm . . . Well, let's see something you've done since the exhibit."

"I haven't done anything, haven't had time."

Julie caught the half-tones of misery and self-abasement in his excuse. She set down her glass and looked at him anxiously.

"I was afraid of that," said Lucien. "Women—chains—squirrel in a cage—I know!"

"A Few Good Parts"

The house telephone rang. Stuart answered it.

"Yes, Sharlene . . . Lucien and Julie are here . . . All right." He hung up and turned "Sharlene's coming up."

Lucien launched into an enthusiastic account fo the exhibit and what every critic had said. Julie gulped down her beer quickly and then repaired her make-up.

Sharlene came in cordially. "Lucien, I'll never forget what a brick you were, attending to all that business for us! And Julie! What a celebrity you're getting to be!"

"Oh!" said Julie grandly. "I've just happened to have a few good parts." (She pronounced it "pawts.") 'Did you have a nice trip?"

"Glorious—of course, Stuart has told you. How about some tea? Oh, I see you're having beer. You still like it best?" looking at Julie, her eyes twinkling.

"I r'ally don't care for it," said Julie, in her best Duchess manner. "It's so fattening! We had such lovely beer in Canada."

"Oh, you've been on a trip, too?" Sharlene was making conversation.

"Location. We're just back in town. You must r'ally pawdon my appearance." She patted her perfectly groomed little figure complacently. "It was so dusty in my compartment, y'know."

'Next time," said Lucien, turning to her with a grin, "I'll have the company send you tourist, if you think that was dusty. Come on egg, we've got to get going. I haven't been home yet."

Lucien walked with Stuart down the stairs, talking cheerfully about Stuart's past work, trying to encourage him to go ahead in spite of the squirrel cage:

"Don't let the gay life get you down, boy—find the time. It's important for you to paint. Everything you produce is worth while—it isn't in you to do a rotten piece of work."

Julie, walking ahead with Sharlene, suddenly grasped her arm, forgetting her duchess role: "He's darn right! I'm worried sick about Stuart. He looks god-awful! Don't you know he'll die if he doesn't work——"

"Come one, Julie," said Lucien impatiently, coming up to take her arm. He propelled her out the door which Brooks was holding open.

Sharlene was stunned. She said nothing at the time, mechanically smiling the guests off. But she glanced at Stuart as he turned instantly away to go back upstairs, and she saw that he did look as badly as Julie had said . . .

Later she followed him up to his studio. He was lying motionless on the couch, face down. She was reminded poignantly of the time he lay so on the sand at Waikiki.

Sharlene went over to look at the daub on the easel, then around the bare room. The closet door was standing open and she saw the canvas on which he had been slaving for days lying on the floor, cut to pieces. Very hesitantly she approached the still figure on the couch and stood for some time looking down at him.

"Stuart, why can't you work?"

"I—don't feel well." Face still hidden, voice muffled.

"Are you ill, dear?"

"No . . . Too much to eat . . . Too much to drink . . . Too full of—nothing!"

"—I won't make any more demands on your time, Stuart. I'll keep everybody away. You shall have the simplest food—"

He sat up and looked at her with bloodshot eyes. "I didn't mean that—but there's nothing here!" He pounded his chest. "I've lost it! I—don't care any more! The smell of paint—nauseates me!"

Sharlene stood away from him, frightened at last at what she had done to him in a year's time . . . After a long pause, she said:

"You can go, Stuart, any time you wish."

"Queen Commands"

He got heavily to his feet. "You mean—?"

"I mean—I'm not going to hold you here—where you can't work—any longer."

He regarded her somberly. "The Queen commands! Off with his head, eh?"

"Oh, Stuart! I'm only trying to be decent—at last. You've given up a year of your life to stand by me. And it's resulted in this—"

Her hand swept toward the destroyed canvas on the closet floor.

He considered her for a long moment, savoring what freedom might mean—toying with a sudden wild hope that perhaps he could prove to himself that he was not a mere "flash in the pan." Then he remembered her plea of a few days ago, that he should stand by her yet a while longer, to spare her scandal . . . It was little enough to do for her.

"Forgive me, dear," he said. "I've been taking myself too seriously. I thought it was important that I should add to the millions and millions of bad pictures in the world. But it isn't at all. The important thing—" he put his hands on her shoulders—"the important thing is to doll up in those new clothes and go out with you tonight and be gay! Let's not be noble, Sharlene. I really don't care! We come this way but once—let's make the most of it! I adore being your Prince Consort!"

It was September before Sharlene paused to think things out. She was cruising about alone in the air one hazy, warm day, with the motor throttled down to a lazy whine—just drifting about over the golden hills.

Since that day in Stuart's studio, when she had offered him his freedom and he had refused to take it, she had known that there had to be a reckoning, but she had let the hectic activity of the summer seize her and take all her time and energy. It had lulled the gnawing ache of regret in her heart, but it had also blinded her to as to just what was happening between her and Stuart.

The Old Stuart

He had changed—he was more taciturn than ever, except when he forced a nervous sort of gayety on occasion. Then he had a rapier tongue for sarcasm and his blue eyes flamed into mocking restless devils.

Sharlene tried to think back to the old Stuart she used to know. It stabbed her to realize how long it had been since she had felt the old warm, pleasant comradeship.

He was ready always at her beck and call. Too ready.

Who wanted a do-nothing for a husband? Oh, Sharlene for shame! You interfered with his work . . . You made him take the money . . .

Stuart hated the money. He hated it because he couldn't support her, himself.

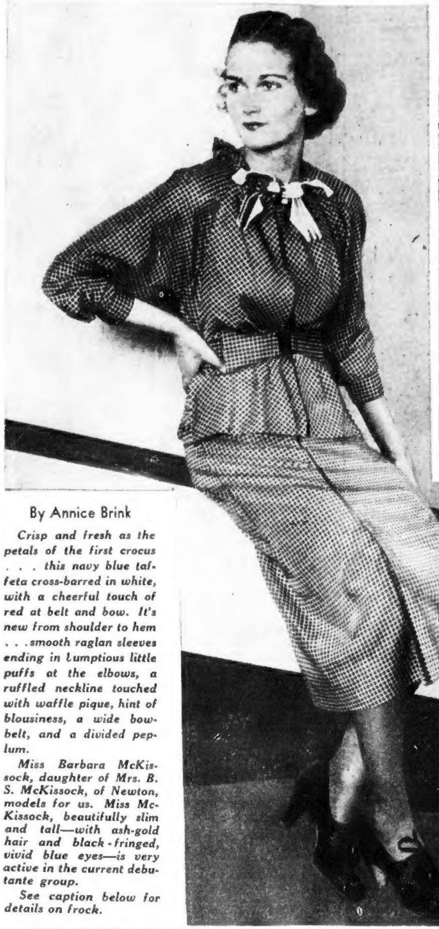
Cross-Barred Taffeta



By Annice Brink

Crisp and fresh as the petals of the first crocus . . . this navy blue taffeta cross-barred in white, with a cheerful touch of red at belt and bow. It's new from shoulder to hem . . . smooth raglan sleeves ending in bumptious little puffs at the elbows, a ruffled neckline touched with waffle pique, hint of blousiness, a wide bow-belt, and a divided peplum.

Miss Barbara McKissock, daughter of Mrs. B. S. McKissock, of Newton, models for us. Miss McKissock, beautifully slim and tall—with ash-gold hair and black-fringed, vivid blue eyes—is very active in the current debutante group.

See caption below for details on frock.

Dropping the Singleton King

On the hand below, South was able to fulfill a game contract, intended as a sacrifice, by dropping a singleton King despite four cards missing in the suit.

West, dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North:
♠ K J 8
♡ A 6 3 2
♣ A J 9 6

West:
♠ A 7
♢ A K J 8 5 4

East:
♠ 9 6 5
♡ Q J 10 9 8 5
♢ Q 7 6
♣ K

South:
♠ Q 10 4 3 2
♡ K
♢ 10 2
♣ Q 10 7 3 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♢	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠ (1)
2 ♢	3 ♠	4 ♡ (2)	4 ♠ (3)
Double	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) A doubtful overcall, but excusable when not vulnerable in view of distribution.

(2) A slight overbid. East felt, with partner opening the bidding and then rebidding freely, it was necessary to show the strength of his heart suit because of the diamond fit.

(3) South bid four spades with no expectation of making it, but he felt he had no defense against the opposing four heart contract.

West opened the King of diamonds, cashed the Ace of that suit, and then shifted to the heart seven. Declarer won with the King, and led a low spade, winning with the King in dummy.

The spade continuation was won by West, who returned another heart, which was won with the Ace in dummy.

The last trump was drawn and East, to the declarer's surprise, was the one who followed. Declarer then had to tackle the club suit.

South tried to count the East hand. East had to have at least six hearts for his rebid, missing the Ace and King, and had showed up with three spades.

In addition, East probably had held three diamonds originally ner's opening lead of the King and continuation of the Ace.

This count, if true, would leave West with only a singleton club.

South consequently led the Queen of clubs, and when East played a low card, the Ace was played from dummy. South's reasoning was rewarded.

East's singleton King dropped and the contract was thus fulfilled.

Games, Dainties
FOR VALENTINE PARTY

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

THE ENTERTAINMENT for a party should be planned just as carefully as the food, so that the evening will move along smoothly.

For Valentine's many old games can be played by adding a new twist to them. A few rubbers of bride may be in order, but do not spend the whole evening that way.

Have a few tables of hearts or old maid for a variation. You will be surprised how much these will be enjoyed. Have all kinds of games which use hearts. Have a jig-saw puzzle contest using red hearts. Cut them up into many pieces, place each in an envelope and distribute to the guests. A time limit should be placed on the solving of this game and the winner rewarded with a small prize.

Hand around red and white paper fancy doilies, scissors and paste and let each guest make a valentine for his partner. Be sure and have a booby prize for this one.

Or play a game of "Famous Lovers." Let each couple draw a slip that the hostess has prepared in advance—each slip bearing the names of a famous pair of lovers in the past. Then each couple must enact a silent movie from some well-known incident in the lives of the couple. Here are a few suggestions: Anthony and Cleopatra, Romeo and Juliet, Priscilla and John Alden, Hamlet and Ophelia.

Scramble up the first lines of love songs, give each guest a pencil and a sheet of paper and a time-limit to figure out the list.

End up the evening with a simple supper:

Crowning Glory

New Way to Hair Beauty

By JULIET SHELBY

IT'S A RARE treat to see healthy long hair on a woman these days; it is still a greater treat to see the crowning glory of a woman so exquisitely lovely as Virginia Bruce!

Don't ask me why Miss Bruce never cut her hair, for I don't know. Good common sense dictated, perhaps, because, as beautiful and gay as she is, Virginia Bruce is blessed with a lot of common sense.

Take, for instance, the care of her hair. A good many Hollywood stars, eager to have their hair photograph fluffy and full of lights, shampoo much too often. But Virginia Bruce holds to the good old-fashioned rule of a shampoo once every three weeks, with plenty of good brushings between, and a good oil treatment before the shampoo.

Her hair is a glowing example that such considerate treatment reaps results in adding allure to personality and beauty. For no matter how lovely and smooth your skin, no matter how sparkling your eyes, you are not a beautiful woman unless your hair shines with health and is nicely coiffured.

If you will not listen to my pleadings, please take the advice of a woman who has spent her life experimenting and investigating the best methols of hair care. And you might also bear in mind that one of the most beautiful girls in Hollywood, Virginia Bruce, has benefited by such advice. Today she has more hair beauty than a good many of the other screen stars.

The woman to whom I refer advocates a shampoo every three weeks, whether you live in a hot or cold climate. She will tell you how to keep your scalp and hair clean between shampoos.

She will also tell you how, with a treatment beforehand and a liquid soap, to shampoo your hair.

To obtain the name of this home hair treatment, and where it is sold, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American. If you prefer calling, phone Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000.

Smooth Forehead

Question: What can I do to keep my forehead free of wrinkles. I am only 29 but I notice small lines appearing already. I wear my hair straight back from my forehead and naturally want to insure a smooth, velvety surface.

Taunton. Celia P.

Answer: A good way to prevent wrinkles is by using a heavy cream freely, with the right manipulations. Here is one way: Place the fingers on both hands, tips to tips, across the forehead. Move upward with one group, down with the other, keeping both of them marching from temple to temple. Rub frowns crosswise. And don't frown. Ironing with ice also helps because it peps up circulation, and hardens the tissues.

A Cape Spring

SPRING in the city will be greeted by gay armies of capes, aflutter in the wind. They're of all sizes and shapes, and it's a poor dress, suit or coat that can't boast a cape of some sort. The most romantic and swashbuckling type is the full length military cape that tops the two-piece suit. Usually the cape and skirt are done in blurry tweeds, with the jacket in solid color. Matching oxfords of brown or blue and a rough straw sailor hat are jaunty accessories.

Beautifully Fitted

BY MARIAN MARTIN

This most adaptable of fashions—tunic dress—is headed for another big season.

Marian Martin has designed ne that is simple and new, and beautiful in fit that you simply can't help looking stunning in it.

Those two darts just above the waist, with their little gathers, see to that. The monk-like cowl with buttons that hold it just in line with the new raglan sleeves, the smart collar and the button-down-back make for smartness.

If you prefer a shorter blouse, just cut it off at the hips, as indicated by marks on the small sketch. Contrast or match the skirt and blouse materials.

Pattern 9203 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 2⅛ yards skirt fabric.

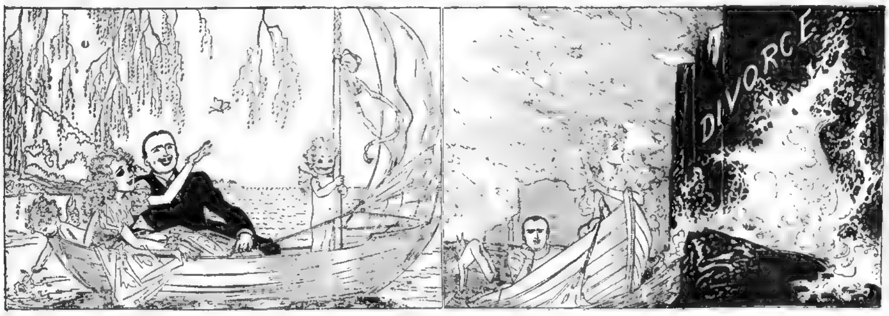
BEATRICE FAIRFAX GIVES ADVICE ON LOVE

Which Loved Best? This Man or This Woman?

By Nell Brinkley



SMOOTH SAILING. THE MODERN WORLD'S FAVORITE LOVERS—SHIPWRECKED

THE MODERN world has had its own love story—Douglas and Mary. Many people considered this pairing of names as romantic as Romeo and Juliet. Romeo and Juliet DIED for each other. Douglas and Mary could not LIVE for each other. They set sail on love's balmy seas, but she wished to return to the home port.

Inevitably, their ship of happiness, uncharted, dashed against the dreary rocks of divorce. Who loved most? I think the one wh[illegible] longed for the peace and securit[y] of a happy home lif[e]—Mary.

Pretense of 'Dumbness' Best Love Trick

ALL GIRLS are actresses, according to a discovery that a learned professor in a Middle-Western college has revealed to the newspapers.

And there's just one favorite role that every wily mother's daughter of them is forever engaged in playing. It's that of the lovely dumb-bell.

With some young sirens, the professor admits, this impersonation doesn't require much effort. But even the brightest of them, girls who secretly enjoy making grades, or girls simply overflowing with good practical "horse sense," are willing to work hard at the job of pretending that they are charmingly, irresistibly stupid, because they know what is to be gained by it.

A girl cannot get her evenings satisfactorily dated up, she cannot have the attention from boys that makes her life exciting, unless she learns to keep her brains in their place. That is to say, compltleely out of sight.

I have no quarrel to pick with the wise and experienced teacher of youth who has made this revelation. I can only politely wonder that it has taken him so long to discover something that most of us have known for a very long time.

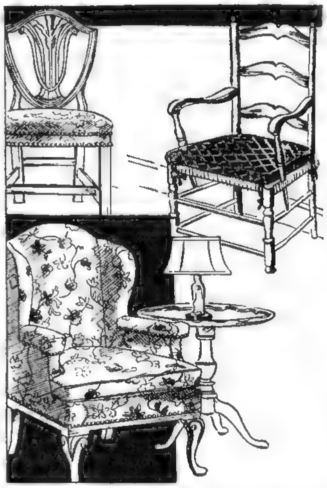
Think for a moment. Have you ever heard an enamored youth explain his choice of a best girl on the grounds of her intelligence? Or listen to the terms in which a young husband praises his bride! Does he claim for a moment there's anything worth mentioning inside that ravishing head of hers? It's for other reasons, isn't it, that women are admired, feted, pursued, adored and married?

Girls learn fairly early, much sooner, it appears, than their professors, that a goodly part of a woman's job in life is to keep up what we have learned to call the "morale" of men. She accepts it as her business to keep men feeling easy, comfortable, happy and contented with themselves. But the dear creatures aren't a bit comfortable if the women they prefer compete with them mentally.

Men are vain things, much as we love them, and in order to secure their love in the first place, and then to retain it on peaceful terms, we have to flatter their vanity. It's their line, they believe, to tell us women what it's all about, and it's our line to look pretty and to listen. We've let men get away with this idea for a good many generations and, so far as I can see, we're going to keep on doing so.

It goes without saying, of course, that to please men and ensnare them properly, a girl's dumbness has to be of a decorative kind. Naturally, we are not speaking of thick-headedness. A girl who wishes to score with men should first be as good to look at as nature and art can make her; second, she must be sweet-tempered and tactful, and finally, she must appear to believe that her boy friends are oracles. Dumbness, you see, can be an art!

Combining Furniture Styles



CHOOSE CHAIRS FOR BEAUTY AND EASE

Gone are the days when a chair was just something to sit on!

Nowadays you'll be wise to choose your chairs at least as carefully as your best dress.

Judge them on these points: Their own good looks and the way they'll look with your other furnishings. Their comfort—because chairs are in almost constant use. Their position—heavier chairs for more or less fixed positions; light, easy-to-move chairs for pulling up to desk, fireplace or bridge table.

Take the chairs in our illustration, for example. All are good-looking, comfortable, and suited to definite uses. The graceful Heppelwhite chair with shield back, at the upper left of our sketch, might be used in living-rooms as an occasional chair or as one of a dining-room set. The French Provincial chair with pad of small plaid at the upper right, would fit into any living-room or hall that was simply furnished. The Queen Anne wing chair at the bottom of the sketch is much used to give charm and comfort to living-rooms. It fits amazingly well with other types of furnishings as, for example, with the Chippendale piecrust table shown in our sketch.

Matching furniture exactly (except for some very definite effect) is now out of date. Sometimes one chair matches a sofa. Or two living-room chairs exactly alike are chosen for the sides of a fireplace or table. But for the most part a room is more gracious and livable, according to present-day ideas, if furniture does not match exactly.

Knowing just how to vary the design of your furnishings and still give an effect of harmony is an important point in decoration. Practically all the Eighteenth Century styles—Queen Anne and Chippendale, for example—may be used together successfully. Early American maple and a graceful Eighteenth Century mahogany chair would never be at home with the heavy oak of the Seventh Century English styles.

Our new 40-page booklet, FURNITURE STYLES, goes much further with this idea of choosing chairs and all other furniture carefully so as to create a thoroughly gracious atmosphere. It describes the furniture of the leading periods, or styles, by word and picture, and shows present-day copies and the accessories that look best with them. It also tells which types can be used together satisfactorily and why. Send for your copy of FURNITURE STYLES. You will refer to it frequently. To order it, use the coupon below.

I ACKNOWLEDGED the patness of Lillian's simile as I saw Avis Arlen's reaction to my father's threat to put her in a small room and lock the door upon her until morning, unless she returned at once to the room which she shared with her mother.

She was like a "pricked balloon" in the completeness of her collapse from the confident air with which she had invested her appeal to Hugh.

"Yes, yes, I will," Avis promised chokingly, with her hand upon her own door knob.

"All right," my father said. "But don't you dare open that door until someone calls you in the morning. You will be summoned in plenty of time for breakfast."

"Yes, yes," Avis chattered again, and soon the door had opened and closed upon her, and Hugh was putting a feverish question to my father.

"Do you think Lee Chow has really gone mad, or is he shamming?"

My father hesitated perceptibly before he replied.

"Frankly, I can't tell," he said. "It looked to me very much like an authentic seizure of insanity. But you know what a consummate actor he is. I do not know him well enough to detect his fraud if he is committing one. That is why I have sent for you."

"I am not sure that I shall be able to detect the difference between a real and pretended seizure," Hugh replied in a troubled voice. "But, at least, no one knows him so well as I do, and I shall watch his reactions very carefully. But tell me. Has your daughter suffered any harm from the fright he gave her? Harry told me of his pursuit of her up the stairs, and of Lillian slamming and locking the nursery door against him just in time."

"I do not think Margaret is any the worse for the experience," my father said slowly, "although, of course, it was nerve racking. But if you don't mind the delay, you may see for yourself how she is. She and Lillian are still in the nursery."

"Oh, may I?"

"We'll stage a little illumination in their honor," she said, smiling whimsically, as she turned on the light switch.

And then Hugh was in the room, having rushed ahead of my father, and with voice and eyes unguarded was saying, as he caught my hands and held them, "Thank God, you are safe and unharmed. I never should have left you had I dreamed he would come back."

Who Loves More Intensely?

KATE SMITH, popular radio artist, says:

"The depth—the enduring quality of the love given—depends wholly upon the temperament of the individual, regardless of whether it be a man or a woman. I think all the famous lovers in history prove that statement. Since the earliest days men—like Mark Anthony, for instance, in his devotion to Cleopatra—were ready to sacrifice everything, even life itself, for love. Women throughout the ages, have left home, country, security to follow the man of their choice, through all sorts of dangers, and privations. The pioneer women of our Revolutionary War days, and later, in the Covered Wagon days, for example, gave up everything that they held dear to be with the men they loved."

GLADYS GLAD, stage star: "I think that, as a rule, women love more sincerely and intensely than men. In perhaps one case out of [illegible] you may find a man who [illegible] [illegible] say the [illegible] [illegible] a woman [illegible] [illegible] upon him. But his type is [illegible].

"A woman's love [illegible] greater [illegible]. It is [illegible] to protect, to [illegible] affections. To a woman, love and marriage are sacred, and constitute a career."

Love Letters of Napoleon

LACK OF HEIR CHILLS LOVE

By HENDRIK W. VAN LOON

Author of "The Story of Mankind," "The Story of the Bible," and Who Has Spent the Last Five Years Making an Intimate Study of the Napoleonic Period

Social workers who know the idosyncrasies of our foreign fellow-citizens better than anybody else will tell you that one marked peculiarity of the Italian race lies deeply rooted in their tremendously developed sense of "family."

The family of the late Carlo Buonaparte might serve as an excellent example of what they mean. For the Buonapartes formed a veritable phalanx in their efforts to improve their own status.

After the father had died the strong will of [illegible] Letizia Ramolino, the Madame Mere of History, became the head of the tribe. And as soon as brother Napoleon had begun his phenomenal rise all the [illegible] and sisters [illegible] hitched their wagon [illegible].

There was first of all the oldest Joseph Buonaparte, [illegible] the tribe [illegible] became successively [illegible] to Rome, King of Naples and finally King of Spain.

The brother who came next to Napoleon, who was [illegible], was Lucien Bonaparte.

Louis was on the staff of his brother during the [illegible] campaigns. But then brother Napoleon, looking for a suitable husband for his stepdaughter, [illegible] decided to marry him to this girl who was the exact counterpart of her flighty mother.

Caroline, the next sister, married Joachim Murat, Napoleon's great cavalry leader. She worked the family connections for all it was worth, so that her husband in quick succession became governor of Paris, Grandduke of Berg and Cleves, a marshal of the Empire and King of Naples.

But we have not reached the end yet. There was the mother, Laetitia Ramolino, "Madame Mère" to the whole Napoleonic tribe. When the crash came she was the only one who had saved something for a rainy day.

What I have chiefly tried to do was to show you what the idea of family meant to a simple minded little Italian boy whom Fate had called upon to be the master of Europe.

And then you will probably begin to understand to why the prospect of dying without an heir, was so abhorrent to Napoleon.

But Napoleon's mind had been made up and the change of attitude in his letters to his wife clearly show that he was preparing the way for the final separation.

Friedland, June 15, 1807.

My dear, I can only write you a word, because I am pretty well exhausted, I have been on the go for some days.

My children (Napoleon's term of endearment for his troops) have worthily celebrated the anniversary of the battle of Marengo (previous battle of which Napoleon was almost as proud as of Austerlitz).

The battle of Friedland will be as celebrated and as glorious for my people. The entire Russian army was driven into rout, 80 pieces of cannon, 30,000 men killed or taken prisoners, 25 Russian generals killed, wounded or captured.

'Tis a worthy sister of Marengo, Austerlitz, Iena. The bulletin will tell you the rest. My losses were not considerable; I maneuvered the enemy with success.

Be calm and content.

Adieu my dear, I have to get on horseback again.

NAPOLEON.

His Notes Grew Cool and Calm

You can give out this news as a notice, if it arrives before the Bulletin. It will be well also to have the canon fired.

July 6, 1807.

I received your letter of June 25. I have seen with discomfort that my military successes do not interest you.

The pretty queen of Prussia is coming to dine with me today.

I am getting along all right and I desire very much to see you again when destiny makes it possible. However, it may not be long.

Goodbye, my dear. Thousand kindest regards,

NAPOLEON.

July 7, 1807.

My dear, the queen of Prussia dined with me yesterday. I had to defend myself against her attempts to get me to make still more concessions to her husband; but I was gallant at the same time standing by my policies.

She is very nice. I will tell you the details which would take too long to relate now.

When you read this letter, peace with Prussia and Russia will have been concluded; and Jerome will have been recognized as King of Westphalia with a population of 3,000,000. This news is for you alone.

Adieu, my dear; I love you and want to know that you are happy and content.

NAPOLEON.

Erfut, October, 1808.

My dear, I have not written for some time. I have been very busy. Conversations all day long. And that doesn't help my cold.

However, everything is going along well. I am very pleased with Alexander (Emperor Alexander of Russia).

I will be home soon now. Take good care of yourself. I hope to find you plump and refreshed when I return. Goodbye, my dear.

NAPOLEON.

From Erfurt, where Napoleon visited peacefully in October, 1808, he sent the following to Josephine at St. Cloud:

I have received your letter, darling. I note with pleasure that you are well. I have just come from hunting on the battlefield of Iena. We lunched in a place where I had passed a night in bivouac.

I attended the ball of Wiemar. Emperor Alexander dances, but not I. Forty years are forty years.

My health is good despite some little ailments. Goodbye, darling, I hope to see you soon.

NAPOLEON.

To Josephine at Paris, January 9, 1809.

Mustache brings me a letter of yours dated December 31.

I see, my darling, that you are sad and worried. Austria will not make war on me. If she does, I have 150,000 men in Germany and as many on the Rhine.

Russia will not break away from me. They're crazy in Paris. Everything is going along all right. I'll be back in Paris as quickly as believe it will be feasible.

I counsel you to beware of ghosts, one fine day, at two o'clock in the morning . . . But goodbye, my darling, I am well and I am all yours,

NAPOLEON.

Mrs. Beeckman on Manners

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am thinking of having some cards made for convenience. How should they be worded and should they be printed? H.

Your cards should be engraved, and for this you must have a plate made. I suggest that you choose Shaded Antique Roman . . . ask your engraver to show you this type of engraving and see if you don't think that it is charming, graceful, distinguished.

Script, too, is lovely, if it is well done and it is always in fashion. [illegible]

[illegible] are for visiting cards are formal [illegible] and must conform with formal rules.

Avoid abbreviations in the name. If you don't like your middle name (as I find so many people don't), omit it rather than using the initial for it. Your name should be engraved after this fashion:

Miss Mary Allen Roberts.

It is in excellent form to have your address engraved in the lower right corner of the card, in the same type of engraving, of course, but in smaller lettering. It is not in good taste to have [illegible] number engraved [illegible] card is 2¼ [illegible] inches wide.

"ALL THE FUN WAS GONE OUT OF LIFE"
says middle aged woman

Many women suffer from hot flashes, dizzy spells, nervousness and other annoying symptoms of the Change of Life. They get so blue and discouraged that life does not seem worth living.

Mrs. Matushek

"All the fun was gone out of life," complains Mrs. S. Matushek of 10907 Edbrooke Ave., Chicago. For five years I was going through a very bad time. I was nervous, had terrible headaches, could not climb stairs and felt swollen. Your Vegetable Compound worked wonders for me. It is a great medicine for any time of life, but especially at the Change and before motherhood. My daughter Lucille used to faint at the office. Your medicine helped her and helped my daughter-in-law too."

"I Had Awful Hot Spells" says Mrs. Harry H. Price of 304 North Harrison Ave., Kankakee, Illinois: "The Vegetable Compound puts pep into me and makes my work easy."

"What they need is a dependable medicine like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

THOMAS On Air Waves AGAIN

BIG BARITONE VOICE BACK

By N. F. T.

Mid-week and what's what by the loudspeakers? Well, for one outstanding thing, and quite gratifying to note, John Charles Thomas gets back into broadcasting harness (WBZ) come 9:30 tonight.

"N. F. T."

Thomas, not so long ago [illegible] the "mighty Wurlitzer" [illegible] writer, meaning his voice [illegible] petition for the best organ ever built, assumes his old coast to coast program place following an extensive concert tour. Hearing him sing "Forgotten" will be well worth an entire evening of dialing before and after. New York sends word he will also offer "Curley Locks," but no doubt the "e" between the [illegible] and the "y" is set down in error [illegible] perchance our own new [illegible] governor is being [illegible], honored in song.

BURYING THE BARON

Jack (the sponsor killer) Pearl, verily as per[illegible] chap as ever peeped a [illegible] into a Radio City sound receptacle, launches his "Peter Pfeiffer" presentation over a nation-wide network of ozone outlets (WNAC) when 10 o'clock this evening rolls around. In his new role the versatile Pearl follows the proprietorship part, [illegible] an imaginary by-the-roadside [illegible] hotel, stopping-off place or what ever he decides to label his [illegible] setting. In any event Pearl puts confidence aplenty [illegible] which [illegible] program will produce at the way of widespread appeal. We [illegible] what we shall hear.

They're [illegible] an hour and a half in which to hold forth for his "Cavalleria Rusticana" conception (WAAB) tonight. Meaning as of 10 to 11:30 p.m. Fabien flays away with the baton over his newly organized Young Musicians Orchestra for the staging of the celebrated operatic offering.

Mary Pickford picks "Daddy-Long-Legs" for her "music" manifestation (WEEI) this evening at 8 o'clock. Mary starred in the silent picture production of the well known Jean Webster comedy drama, although it has been [illegible] and done and done [illegible] and radio themes any number of times since.

• • •

Milton Berle, who [illegible] noted for stealing stories from other comedians and doesn't mind being thusly branded, migrates to the RKO Theatre in person on Friday, coming. Milton claims that [illegible] good a field in which to succeed as any.

Sort of a joke highjacker. Write [illegible] but as romantic and [illegible] it as ever was Robin Hood of [illegible] fame.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

The more one thinks of the possible results of an anti-administration decision by the Supreme Court upon the gold cases, and the longer one waits for such a decision, the more one wonders whether Jefferson and Jackson were not taking the long view when they protested against what they termed usurpation of power by Mr. Chief Justice John Marshall over a hundred years ago.

Robert E. Rogers

I say John Marshall, because it was his federalistic point of view, his determination that the Supreme Court should not knuckle down to the Congress, and his smashing logic in his decisions upholding the paramount power of the Constitution, the federal government, and the sacredness of contracts that established the present situation so firmly that any thought of questioning either the right or the power of the Court to declare what is constitutional is unheard of.

The most recent criticism of the Court has seldom gone further than decrying the inconclusive five to four decisions—morally inconclusive, I mean—or suggesting an enlargement of its personnel, or something equally moderate.

Yet it was his work to put us in such a situation that there can be no communication between the Executive and the Supreme Court or the Congress and the Supreme Court.

The Executive cannot even ask—unless I am splitting hairs too finely and I believe I am not—when a decision may be expected.

The separation of powers is complete to a degree that perhaps the Constitutional Convention never really planned or anticipated or that the old-time Republican-Democrats never thought advisable or possible. Will Rogers' crack about the nine old men is true to an almost startling extent.

Would Save Time

It is permissible to wish that John Marshall had gone still further in his assumption of power by the Court.

We should all be happier and less uncomfortable if the Supreme Court had arrogated to itself the right to pass on the constitutionality of laws before those laws were passed and signed, instead of waiting until a constitutionally correct case had "like a wounded snake dragged its slow length along" to its proper place and time for ultimate disposal.

A good deal of time and money and anxiety might have been saved—as in the present case.

The Constitution says specifically that "the judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity arising under the Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made under their authority"—a pretty slim authorization, if you were to ask Thomas Jefferson or Andrew Jackson, for declaring laws passed by the Congress and signed by the Executive to be unconstitutional.

Surely England, with an unwritten constitution and no judicial body recognized as superior to the Parliament, is free from our particular embarrassments.

No social legislation in England has ever had to depend on a Supreme Court changing its mind under an unexpected shift of a five to four decision, such as happened at the time of the first child labor bill. England has never had to wait until a death or two in a board of nine elderly gentlemen to change the political, economical and philosophical complexion of government.

Bludgeon the Lords

It is true that the Liberals in the House of Commons had to bludgeon the House of Lords into accepting Lloyd George "socialistic budget" of 1911 by the threat of creating new peers. A violent measure, no doubt, yet far more practical and probable than the possibility of packing the Supreme Court by a constitutional amendment.

I can imagine the shrewd and wise shade of Montesquieu raising his eyebrows a little ruefully at the mess he got us into by praising the balance of power theory so highly that a literal minded composition was encouraged to manufacture a machine constantly liable to stopping at dead center, with nothing to be done about it in a crisis.

As Mr. Dooley so cheerfully reminded us once upon a time, the Supreme Court follows the election returns. That constitutes a ground for hope. Yet, after all, one can't help thinking that the present Postmaster General could probably have written a more practical Constitution. Maybe he will, if things get too difficult for the administration.

UNDERFED

Baby O. K. Now

A series of wails, emerging from the folds of a blue blanket in Cambridge district court, today informed the world that Joan Taylor, five weeks' old, will grow up to be a big girl after all.

The baby, taken from her parents, Frank and Frances Taylor, of Boylston street, Cambridge, on February 1, had been on the danger list at Cambridge City Hospital, victim of malnutrition, since then.

FROM HOSPITAL TO COURT, ACCUSED OF STEALING MAIL

From Cambridge City Hospital to East Cambridge District Court today went Bernice Andrews accused of rifling mail boxes. The girl was placed under guard after a nurse said she believed preparations had been made for an escape. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Bernice Andrews, 22, pleaded guilty to a larceny charge in East Cambridge court today.

For lack of $500 bail, pending disposition of the case, Miss Andrews was taken to East Cambridge jail.

When arrested Miss Andrews gave her address as Lowell street, Boston.

Police charge her with larceny of a piece of paper from Mrs. Margaret Grogan of 323 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge. They testified it was a letter in a mail box.

In Cambridge City Hospital for a minor operation after her arrest, Miss Andrews was turned back to police last night when a patient reported to a nurse that she was planning to escape.

4 GIRLS Saved in FIRE

OTHERS FLEE IN WEST END

Trapped by smoke and flames, close to death, four girls were rescued by police and firemen today during a blaze that swept a four story apartment house at 11 North Russell street, West End.

Another girl risked her life to arouse others. In all, a dozen residents were driven out.

Station 1 police rescued Dorothy Jenson, 26, and Marion Sommers, 21, from the first floor, and Caroline Kean, 25, from the second, carrying them from the building.

Trapped on the second floor Mary McLeod, 24, retained presence of mind enough to recline on the floor, escaping as much smoke as possible. Firemen carried her out, nearly unconscious.

Others Led Out

Awakened on the third floor, Peggy Wilson ran to the floor above to arouse others.

She was led to safety with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kerwin, Mr. and Mrs. Israel Davis, Nicholas Aimenteno, Alfred Barkin and Fred Parkhurst.

Dr. Joseph W. Devine, police surgeon treated several for smoke inhalation.

The fire, officials said, was caused by an overheated furnace. Damage was $1100.

DANGLES From Window UNCONSCIOUS

Six stories above Federal street, from a ledge of the Chamber of Commerce building, a window washer dangled at the end of his safety belt—unconscious—today.

In the street below, a crowd fascinated by the awful possibilities of the situation, waited for a rescue.

Patrolman Chester Lucas ran into the building, commandeered an elevator to the six floor and pulled the window washer from his precarious position.

Alfred LaFleur, 30, of 192 Broadway, South Boston, the rescued man, said he slipped from the window ledge and immediately became unconscious.

He was treated for nervous prostration at Haymarket Relief Station, then sent home.

Connolly Seen as New Postmaster

Patrick J. Connolly, Dorchester civic leader and assistant superintendent of the mails, was being mentioned today as Boston's postmaster.

Connolly was looked upon by some as compromise candidate to settle the dispute over Postmaster William E. Hurley, Republican holdover, and Peter F. Tague, Governor Curley's candidate.

Dispatches from Washington said there was strong likelihood of the Dorchester man being named.

Connolly is 58. He makes his home at 16 Stanley street, Dorchester. His brother, now Judge Thomas Connolly of Brighton, was a secretary to U. S. Senator David I. Walsh during the Walsh regime as governor.

DR. FAXON Gets Bigelow BERTH

Massachusetts General Hospital authorities, after waiting more than two months word of the missing Dr. George H. Bigelow, today appointed Dr. Nathaniel Waler Faxon as director in his place.

Dr. Faxon comes here from Strong Memorial Hospital, Rochester, N. Y., where he had been director since 1922.

Before that he was at Massachusetts General as assistant under Dr. Frederick Washburn.

Dr. Faxon is a native of South Braintree where his father is a practising physician. He is a graduate of Harvard Medical School in 1905 and for the following two years was [illegible] officer at the Massachusetts General.

He is a veteran of overseas service in the medical corps and a member of the American Legion.

Calls Hearing

POLICE RULE BARED NEXT WEDNESDAY

Governor Curley sent an order for the removal of Police Commissioner Joseph J. Leonard to the executive council today.

At the same time, he announced that he would preside, starting next Wednesday, at a public meeting of the council on the ouster proceedings against the commissioner.

"And we'll sit right through Washington's birthday if necessary," he added.

To Bare Methods

The governor's deference to the commissioner's demand for a public hearing is understood to be based upon a final opinion on the inefficient conditions claimed in the city department.

A complete airing of the Cocoanut Club case is expected together with a review of other cases going back into the administration of former Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman.

The hearing it is expected will provided the basis for an order for the removal of Hultman from the Metropolitan District Commission.

Governor Curley is known to head public hearing concerned with the desire of the councillors, a majority of whom believe the commissioner should be ousted but think conditions of the department should be revealed.

Feeney in Charge

In connection with his ouster order the Governor said:

"The activities of Republican leaders in hastening the passage of the bill for the appointment by the mayor of the police commissioner of Boston—in fact requesting that immediate action be taken and that no referendum be had upon the bill—leaves no course open for me other than to hold a public hearing on the removal of the present police commissioner.

"Because I am satisfied that if this council removed him, the mayor of Boston would appoint him.

"Therefore, I shall request a public hearing to prove the man's incompetency and inefficiency, and the impotency of his predecessor so that an opportunity may be provided for protection to the public rather than the violators of the law."

The hearing will start at 12 noon a week from today. John P. Feeney and Henry P. Fielding are special to prosecute the case for [illegible].

CAPITAL, LABOR Fight Prison Goods

Capital and labor joined in protest at the State House today against the sale of prison-made products.

The protestations came at a hearing on a bill which would repeal the law which provides that prison-made products be sold to cities and towns to the exclusion of private business.

O.O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK

Day By Day

New York, Feb. 13—Peter Arno, deservedly or not, is the society scribblers' top Romeo of the moment.

Nearly every day he is bracketed with a new Juliet—flying across the continent to see one who is ill, in Row A at an opening with another or filling a liner's cabin with flowers for still another.

The fact is the tall handsome cartoonist is an excellent peg upon which to hang such paragraphic romanticisms.

O. O. McIntyre

Talented in music as well as his sketching, he is constantly abreast the gay breakers of life, a prototype of many novelists' hero [illegible] in love story.

His choppy career [illegible] provides a little glamour.

A runaway from Yale who [illegible] an orchestra to tom-tom for Gilda Gray in a night club, lean days in the Paris attics, his tempestuous marriage to the brilliant Lois Long and a spectacular [illegible] into theatrical producing.

All this plus his ribald drawings which did so much to give the New Yorker a leg-up in formative days.

Also that blacking brush metier that changed over night the long accepted formula for comic art.

Too, with all his sophistication, he expresses shyness. That, perhaps, is the catch!

It was a brand of starry-eyed wistfulness that exhibited the dramatic critics recently in a personal hallelujah, never before equaled, for Elisabeth Bergner, imported pee wee from Germany via London.

There was not even a mild peep from a dissenter.

It was the first time, too, in years such an extravagant build-up did not collapse with the first night performance.

Hers was the biggest individual knockout of the season. Her play, terrible.

Gloria Vanderbilt in opening a gown shop, adds another headline name to those who have turned to trade.

Gloria Opens Shop

The list includes Cobina Wright, Marjorie Oelrichs, Marian Cooley, Mrs. Jack Stafford and a dozen others.

Cobina Wright has likely endured the greatest bludgeoning. And shown the greatest spunk.

The cataclysm that engulfed her included the loss of a fortune, divorce and a series of operations.

Yet she has won a place singing on the radio and carried on without whimpering. Non-whimperers win all of us these days.

There was a morsel for the feature writers, too, in the return of Charles E. Mitchell, the banker, to the financial scene a month ago.

His comparatively small office space in Broad st. indicated he was beginning again from scratch. The only throw-back to his more opulent days was the ever-present carnation in his lapel.

The scarcity of pawn-shop in mid town is not another phase of the economic eclipse.

There are as many as ever, but they have found more dignified sanctuary.

Any number are now in large office buildings and instead of the three familiar gold balls and blackened windows up there there is just the usual frosted door marked "Loans."

The new locations brought customers who would not have visited the more conspicuous establishments.

Most newspapermen have had copious dealings with the pawn broker.

I owned a watch that was hung up with unfailing regularity every Monday—or I went lunchless. The watch was paid out many times in interest.

Indeed it got to be a dreary and sullen transaction: the ticket on the counter and $4.75 out of the window without a word between us.

A Hot-cha Name

But my pawnshop name was rather hot-cha. To Mr. Solomon's clerk I was Rupert Q. Mortimer, a travelous worldling who lived but for the moment. I often wondered why I duded it up further with that Q.

There was another sure-fire port of call during the hard-up stretches. Louis Katz, sleek and bediamonded clerk at our theatrical hotel, was always, bless him, good for a fiver without interest.

He was the first [illegible] I ever saw with manicured [illegible]. So magnificent was their [illegible] I stopped biting mine.

Probably [illegible] does it. Not [illegible] I would [illegible] the jazz-jazz.

Now [illegible] I am in constant [illegible]. Everybody seems to be [illegible] restaurants these days.

If I get [illegible] to it I'm going to have [illegible] so muffled that [illegible] feature will be our [illegible].

I [illegible] Rudy Vallee would [illegible] during [illegible] now [illegible].

CHILD Labor Fight BEGINS

BACKERS SPEAK AT HEARING

Fifty thousand boys and girls under 18 years of age are permanently injured in industry each year in the United States.

This statement was made today by Robert J. Watt, secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, at a State House hearing on ratification of the Child Labor Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

Watt said:

"Twenty-four states have already ratified this amendment and 12 more are needed to adopt it.

"No state in the Union ought to be more in favor of this than Massachusetts, because no state has whined so much about unfair competition from sweatshop conditions in other states.

"In this connection, Governor Curley, tomorrow, is having a conference with a view to saving the textile industry of Massachusetts.

"For 100 years, we have been trying to abolish child labor in America.

"In 1930 Governor Ely told the general court that if competition continued Massachusetts would have to lower its labor standards to meet it.

"Eventually these standards were lowered.

"Women are now working at night in mills.

"From 1920 to 1930, 59 boys and girls in Massachusetts were killed in industry, while in the same period 825 others were permanently disabled. There is no state law to keep children out of hazardous occupation.

"This state has made no attempt to adapt itself to a new day in industry brought about by new and dangerous processes in manufacture.

"The NRA has helped, but no one knows what will happen to this temporary expedient after June 16."

AGED MAN Facing Gun, BATTLES TRIO

Cornelius Lyons, 75, was seriously beaten today resisting three thugs who had robbed him of $751 in a store at 1062 W[illegible] street, Roxbury. Lyons had just opened his bird store when the thugs entered.

In spite of a revolver pointed by the leader, Lyons grappled with him. He was struck from behind by the others. The leader went directly to a hiding place in the store where Lyons had hidden his [illegible].

Police took the seriously injured man to City Hospital. [illegible] placed his name on the danger list. The thugs escaped in a sedan.

Flood of Entries Received For Pinochle Tournament

By the PINOCHLE TOURNAMENT EDITOR

A veritable snowstorm of entries have been showering into the Boston Evening American from pinochle enthusiasts intent upon entering this newspaper's forthcoming championship pinochle tournament.

The tournament, which will be under the general direction of P. H. Sims, foremost authority on bridge, starts Monday afternoon in the Hotel Bradford ballroom. It will continue for three weeks and there will be nine sessions of play.

Lombard Williams and Rosamond Vahey, two of New England's outstanding bridge champions and teachers, will assist Sims in managing the tournament.

The game will be two handed pinochle and will be for games, not points—1000 points constituting a game.

Prizes offered by the Boston Evening American in the Boston pinochle tournament will be: first prize, $300 and second and third prizes, $100 each. There will be 50 additional prizes of autographed copies of Sims' "Pinochle Pointers" for the 50 next highest scores.

In addition to the cash award of $300, the Boston winner will receive a free trip to New York and an opportunity to compete for the national championship award of $10[illegible].

The contest is open to the public. The only requirement is that you clip the entry blank accompanying the pinochle tournament [illegible] elsewhere in this issue, fill it [illegible] and send it to the Pinochle Tournament Editor, Boston Evening American. Cards, tables and score-sheets will be furnished free of charge.

The 25 cent entry fee for the first day's play only will be turned over to the Emergency Campaign [illegible].

THIEF SOBS Way to Freedom

Caught ransacking the home of Mrs. Margaret G[illegible] on Western avenue, Lynn, when the latter heard a noise in the dining room, a 22-year-old youth sobbed his way to freedom before the police arrived today.

Mrs. Gillant grappled with the burglar and held him while she called the police. But before the latter arrived the burglar blurted out a story that caused the woman to allow the youth to depart.

RELIEF Cost in State 10 MILLIONS

If "extras" were included in the survey, Massachusetts' monthly relief bill would reach ten million dollars, ERA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch said today.

As it is, he declared, 650,415 persons are getting $8,519,714.44 each month. He included men and women on ERA rolls, on public welfare and those receiving soldiers' relief.

Administrator Rotch said that not included in his figures were disbursements for mothers' aid, old age assistance, hospitalization, boarding of state wards, public burials and care of transients. The ERA cost to the state was $5,619,688 for the month of December, he said.

LONE Officer Ruins ALKY LANDING

Newburyport, Feb. 13—A lone patrolman smashed a big time alcohol smuggling operation here today.

He sent a fast cruiser speeding seaward, scattered an unloading crew with four shots and seized alcohol valued at $8000 and a new $10,000 ten-ton truck.

Patrolman Francis D. Foley was the one-man '[illegible].'

He walked into the landing party on St[illegible] wharf off Water street just before 4 a. m. A lookout shouted, the officer flashed his light on the operations and fired into the air.

The crew off the alky boat cut the wharf lines and sped down river.

SWEENEY Gun in Channel, POLICE TOLD

Police today received information that the gun used in the murder of Joseph "Red" Sweeney at the Cosmos Club last Friday morning was thrown into Fort Point Channel from the Dover street bridge.

Soon after their informant departed from headquarters, police arranged to hire a professional diver to make a search for the weapon.

According to the informant the gun was thrown over the bridge rail from an automobile about an hour after Sweeney arrived at the City Hospital.

PROFESSORS In Shoe Study

Governor James M. Curley has invited Massachusetts textile leaders and professors of economics from the universities of the state to meet tomorrow in his office. President Conant of Harvard, President Compton of M. I. T., and Dean Donham of the Harvard business school, were also invited. Textile problems and the means of safeguarding the shoe industry in New England will be discussed.

Pinochle Talk

Are you an entrant in the Boston Evening American's championship pinochle tournament?

If you are, listen in on Rosamond Vahey's five-minute talk concerning the tournament tonight at 7:45 o'clock over Station WAAB.

Miss Vahey, who with Lombard Williams is assisting P. Hal Sims, bridge authority, in directing the tournament, will explain briefly the details of entering the tournament and name some of the latest entrants in the tournament. The tournament starts Monday.

FEAR Missing Girl DEAD

HOPE FOR ETTA RIEL WANES

Oxford, Feb. 13—State detectives pressed the search today for missing Etta Riel, almost convinced she is dead.

They believe the former Teachers' College student would have communicated by this time with her distraught family, as a result of the hue and cry of search, if she still lived.

While the girl's relatives continued to scout the suicide theory, investigators interviewed Mrs. L. G. Doolittle, mother of Henry "Red" Sawin, former Bates student and reputed sweetheart of the girl.

They also visited the law firm of Heller & Heller, original counsel for Sawin in his defense of Miss Riel's claim that he was father of her child.

This complaint is still pending.

A local undertaker and Oxford Cemetery officials were among those interviewed by the investigators.

Telephones for Malden city officials will be removed from public expense status the end of this month, the Common Council has decreed. There are about 30 such telephones.

ROURKE Slated for FIN. COM. POST

Joseph A. Rourke, former public works commissioner, engineer and "father" of the high pressure water system in Boston, may succeed to the position now held by Joseph McKenney, Boston College football coach, on the finance commission.

This was learned today following reports that the way is clear for McKenney's appointment by the school committee as associate director of physical education in Boston schools. The position became vacant last week when James H. Crowley died.

Rourke is vacationing in Florida. He does not know that he is being considered for the position by Governor Curley.

Speaking of Rourke, Governor Curley once said:

"He is the greatest liability politically, a man can have, but the greatest asset the people of Boston possess."

350 Club To Honor Mary Curley

Miss Mary Curley, daughter of the governor, will be honored at a reception and supper-dance given by the Three Hundred and Fifty Club at the Copley-Plaza on Washington's Birthday.

Mrs. Edward F. Goode of Dorchester is president of the organization of 750 Curley women workers.

Miss Florence Hurley of Jamaica Plain is chairman in charge of arrangements for the reception. The committee includes the following:

Mrs. John Dunphy, Miss Mayline Donnelly, Miss Kathryn Glynn, Miss Madeline O'Connor, Miss Agnes Goode, Mrs. William Brine, Jr., Mrs. James Duane, Mrs. Thomas Sullivan, Mrs. Daniel J. Holland and Miss Miriam McCue.

LEO B. CORCORAN Hudson P. O. Head

Washington, Feb. 13 (AP)—The Post Office Department today announced appointment of Leo B. Corcoran as acting postmaster at Hudson, Mass.

G. O. P. Seeks High TARIFF

SEN. DICKINSON IN PLEA HERE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Preservation of domestic production under a protective tariff was laid down as sound Republican doctrine by Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, guest speaker at a Lincoln dinner of the Middlesex Club at the Hotel Statler.

Speaking to 500 Republicans, Senator Dickinson denounced present tariff negotiations, which, he said, suggest that certain American industries should be sacrificed in order to find a foreign market for other American products.

The senator emphasized that in many stores today it is impossible to buy American dishes or glassware; a situation which was recently disclosed by Governor Curley after an inspection of dishes at the City Club and the Chamber of Commerce revealed they were made in England and Bavaria, respectively.

At Low Ebb

Senator Dickinson pointed out that the earthenware industry in America is at a low ebb. He said:

"This is one of the industries that is called inefficient and should be sacrificed. It would be better for us to protect this industry by the necessary tariff schedule.

"It is the belief of the Republican party that, instead of chasing rainbows, instead of following panaceas, instead of attempting shortcut economic remedies, individuals must steel themselves to meet conditions.

Only Cure

"It is for business to readjust itself to where it can survive under existing conditions. No other cure will long be effective."

Former Attorney-General Jay R. Benton, president of the club, presided. At the head table, guests included former Governor Frank G. Allen, Governor H. Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Speaker Leverett Saltonstall, Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton, Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, Chairman Vernon E. Marr of the Republican state committee, John Richardson, national committeeman and former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols.

A semblance of enthusiasm was aroused in an otherwise tame celebration when Secretary of State Cook ventured the prediction that two more years would see a Republican governor as the guest of the club.

KAMINSKI PENS Farewell Notes

Penning two letters to his parents, Alexander J. Kaminski resigned himself today, Warden James B. Hogsett said, to death in the electric chair at state prison next week.

The youthful slayer has not yet written the appeal he said he intended to send Governor Curley.

His only visitor today was Rev. Ralph W. Farrell, prison chaplain.

BUST THAT COLD WIDE OPEN

Don't Merely Check It With Half-Way Measures!

Deal with a cold in earnest. Deal with it in seriousness.

A cold is too fraught with danger to be taken lightly. Many a case of flu and pneumonia has started with nothing more than a "common cold".

Treat a cold for what it is—an internal infection. Therefore, internal treatment.

Treat a cold with a preparation made for colds and not a "cure-all".

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is your answer to a cold.

It is a cold tablet, made expressly for the treatment of colds and not for all kinds of ailments.

It is internal in effect and it does four important things.

First, it opens the bowels, an important step in overcoming a cold.

Second, it checks the infection in the system, a vital step.

Third, it relieves the headache and fever.

Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

These are the four effects a cold calls for and only in Bromo Quinine do you get them all in the form of a single tablet.

Play safe—make sure! The moment a cold threatens, go right to your druggist for a package of Grove's Bromo Quinine. Begin taking the tablets immediately, two every four hours, until relieved.

Usually that will be in the space of 24 hours. For, that's how fast Bromo Quinine acts when taken promptly.

Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is safe to take. Ask for it with your mind made up that you're not going to accept a substitute.

Slaying Tip Brings $25 Prize

By THE NEWS TIP EDITOR

The Cosmos Club slaying that rocked police circles turned good fortune in the way of a Boston Evening American reader last week.

Because he was alert and called the News Tip Editor, he won first prize of $25 in the weekly awards that total $50.

The reader asked that his name be withheld.

Two other prizes of $5 each, two of $2.50 each and ten of $1 each were awarded to others who sensed the value of news.

Mrs. Royal Manson of Pope street, Hudson, and R. Logue of Cross street, Medford, were given the $5 checks. Both reported spectacular fires.

Mrs. H. P. Charles of Hansborough street, Dorchester, — one of the $2.50 checks for another big fire. The other went to a man who reported the lea, of a patient at Boston City Hospital.

The $1 awards went to:

(Name Withheld) Disappearance of Brockton man.

Hugh Queenan, Warren avenue, Woburn. Auto accident.

Leo Myatt, East Seventh street, South Boston. Story of rescue.

Christine Deane, Geneva avenue, Dorchester. Mother locked out of her house by her baby.

Frank Gassia, Rossmore street, Somerville. Story of sucide.

Herbert Fieldhouse, Sudbury street, Boston. Tip on a fatal accident.

Wallace Williams, Gallivan boulevard, Dorchester. Tip on auto crash.

Hattie Skinner, 125 Warwick street, Roxbury. Tip on explosion.

Try your hand this week. You may be able to win one of the larger awards. Call the News Tip Editor, Liberty 4000.

TAGUE Likens Curley TO LINCOLN

Comparing the present economic strife with the disjointed state of the Union in Civil War times, ex-Congressman Peter F. Tague likened Governor Curley to Abraham Lincoln.

The governor was the type of the Great Emancipator, Tague said, in that he was striving to give the country back to the people, just as Lincoln did. He characterized the governor as "dogged, tireless, determined," in his public service.

Ex-Congressman Tague was orator at the annual Lincoln Day exercises in Faneuil Hall. The program was under auspices of the Eliot School Association. Special patriotic ceremonies by a detachment from the Boston Navy Yard featured the affair.

HARDING WINS Revere Post

Harry J. Harding was chosen president of the Revere Chamber of Commerce and A. Van Balsam, vice-president after a heated controversy between Mayor James M. O'Brien and former Mayor Andrew A. Casassa. Harding was one of O'Brien's managers in the last campaign and Balsam had supported Casassa.

MICE 'Ate Up' Bank RECORDS

CASH DATA IN SUIT SOUGHT

Mice entered the $3,200,000 suit against the closed Federal National Bank of Boston today.

Harold M. Curtis, former vice-president and treasurer of the closed Brockton Trust Company, one of the suing trust companies, testified:

"Mice have chewed up a lot of the copies of the daily cash letters."

He was being asked to produce the records of daily transactions by Attorney Robert G. Dodge, counsel for the receivers of the Federal National Bank, in cross-examination.

Curtis promised that he would bring in what was left of the records.

Record Traced

Under questioning of Attorney Dodge, it was brought out that the original of a report made to the bank commissioner was not in the possession of either former officials of the closed bank or Attorney Neil Leonard, counsel for the bank examiner.

Curtis testified that the report was taken from the Brockton Trust Company to Boston by Frank A. Fa[illegible], assistant cashier of the Federal National Bank.

A maze of records of the closed banks were being examined to trace loans and interest on loans alleged to have been made to Daniel C. Mullowney, former president of the Federal National Bank, and Charles A. McCarron of Newton.

Other trust companies suing with the Brockton Trust Company are the Inman Trust Company of Cambridge, the Lawrence Trust Company of Lawrence and the Bancroft Trust Company of Worcester.

The Brockton Trust Company seeks to recover $450,000; the Inman Trust, $1,100,000, the Lawrence Trust, $650,000 and the Bancroft Trust, $1,000,000.

"MUMSIE" VISITS Baker in Jail Shop

Fortified by a visit from Mary Mernicke, or Murdock, the "Mumsie" of his trial, Roger E. Baker began work today in the hosiery shop at state prison.

Baker, baseball and cafe impresario, was sentenced last week to 12 to 22 years for larceny from the Dimond-Grynkraut Kid Manufacturing Company.

Cockroaches carry germs of disease and filth from cellars and sewers to the pantry shelves and food containers.

NOW IS THE TIME TO GET RID OF THEM

Liquids will kill only 10%. Poison powders will do almost the same. There is only one sure and safe way to entirely rid the house of the pests. Roaches are night feeding bugs. They don't appear until late, and then the entire family turns out for its daily meal. Feed them something they like better than ordinary food, something that is non-poisonous and does not drive them back into the walls.

DON'T

There are two Don'ts to do when you get cockroaches and water bugs.

(1) Don't get panicky and move out. It costs $25 or more to move out, while a can of Cheney's Killer costs 25c. Move the cockroaches out.

(2) Don't get used to cockroaches. It's no disgrace to have them but it is a disgrace to keep them. Treat them as Pests, not Pets. We guarantee

AUSTEN LAKE on

McKenney's Football Obituary

Austen Lake

HAVING PORTRAYED the college football coach as an indolent and generally overrated fellow, who ought to reform and go to work instead of exploiting the sufferings of the boys for his own gain, I should congratulate Joe McKenney of Boston College on his full-time job with the Boston schools.

But I repent my old words. Because McKenney is a museum piece in the coaching field and practically priceless, like the Gutenberg Bible, so that it is a pity to hide this rich treasure away in a Beacon Hill office.

McKenney is a fresh-air man, who never swindled his players out of their rightful glory, or authored fake newspaper pieces, or went around taking bows or selling testimonials.

Being born with a shoe horn in his mouth, instead of a silver spoon, he had a natural aptitude with kids, who always gave him more of themselves than he asked.

Cav's Legacy to Joe

JOE INHERITED THE B. C. football job soon after Major Frank Cavanaugh let go in 1926, and when it enjoyed an unfortunate reputation, due to the major's lamented talent for tactless sayings and the robust quality of his teams' play.

I never held Cav blameful for this, being an old '49er who grew out of football's barbarous day when coaches lit their cigars from the sparks of their gnashed teeth and harangued their men in guttural glory growls.

The major had a supreme contempt for physical weakness, so that toward the end of his career at Fordham, when his sight failed, his voice dimmed and his knees buckled, he would sit on the bench and force a ghost of his old growl.

And when he could no longer growl he died, a victim of misunderstood ideals.

To Cav a college squad was a small standing army, recruited with a king's shilling and drilled to hardship. And football was a modified form of warfare to be waged in a spirit of give-all sacrifice.

It was a whiskery day to which his old boys refer with a loving curse while tapping their chests and saying, "But, by crackie, we were MEN."

McKenney Recovers the Fumble

BUT WHEN McKENNEY TOOK OVER, B. C. abolished athletic scholarships, forsook the baseball park background, stopped cash subsidies and went back to the strict definition of amateurism.

And Joe, in his pious, big-brother way, became not only a football tutor, but a messenger of good will, charged with wooing back some of the lost friendship.

He taught his kids politeness and the ABC's of graceful co-ordination, so that officials and rivals were soon saying what a well-mannered, knowing set they were.

But there was not much money in all this, and a good deal of internal suffering, so that Joe would nibble his cuffs and thresh in his sleep, like other coaches.

It was an itchy existence which now he is content to exchange for the cool, cloistered sanctuary of a desk job at richer pay, long vacations and an opportunity for quiet communion with himself.

Stud Poker Statecraft

THE SMALL FRY STATESMEN on Beacon Hill are poking sticks into the State racing bill like small boys roasting potatoes in a bonfire.

At the moment there are 13 amendments waiting enactment, like 13 pigmy pies made from left-over pastry crust. These range from a charity enterprise to outright repeal, of which the following are samples:

1—No racing on public property.
2—Track percentage limited to 5 per cent.
3—Non-residents of state, or those affiliated with foreign tracks, forbidden as stockholders, employes or executives.
4—Abolish State Racing Commission and substitute Professional Sports Commission.
5—All breakage to go to state.
6—State to operate track for charity and sell stock to public, guaranteeing 6 per cent interest.
7—Repeal the entire racing law.
8—Investigate the commission.
9—Appoint four additional commissioners.

While some of these riders are sincere outpourings of earnest hearts, most of them aim to delay acceptance of the law and the start of track construction.

To build a track in East Boston, or elsewhere, ground work must start not later than March.

Yet the Legislature can, by adroit blocking, defer settlement until next June, thus preventing Governor Curley from exercising his veto on alterations from the original bill until it is too late for 1935.

Bowdoin's Plum Tree

THE BOWDOIN COLLEGE job is the richest small college football plum in the East, paying $8000 for the head coachship, or as much as Harvard paid Eddie Casey each season. With Adam Walsh still a neck in front, others mentioned are Lew Manly of Tufts, Fred Ostergren of Arlington and Arthur Sampson.

Tom McCabe, Holy Cross A. A. director, tells me that he will make a determined effort to have the B. C.-H. C. football game moved to Worcester in 1936 . . . Babe Ruth's able demonstration with a cricket bat in London recently recalls Don Bradman's attempts to wield a baseball bat at major league pitching during the American tour of the Australian cricket team a few years back.

Where Bradman, accustomed to hitting the ball on the bound with his beaver-tail paddle, failed to nick the baseball with a skinny, beanpole bat, Babe blew his London cricket servings all over the field.

Adam Walsh captained the Four Horsemen, Notre Dame's immortal 1924 eleven.

REGGIE TRACK ACES PERFORM

A AND B SHOT AT ENGLISH

FLAT EVENTS OF DISTRICTS TOMORROW

By Bill Connell

Dozens of Boston schoolboy field event toilers scattered to four in-town schools today for the opening duels of the 27th annual Regimental School championships.

Class A and B shot puts were on at English, Class C and D shot at Commerce, high jumps at Latin and broad jumps at Trade.

While the regimental track events are a couple of weeks away, today's events were expected to give a fair indication of the ultimate champion.

Lynn Classical's court team was headed for Beverly, and Peabody was at Lynn English in outstanding basketball tilts of the day.

District meet running events trials at the East Armory tomorrow keep the track action brisk.

Today's school bill included:

TRACK

Regimental meet field events.

HOCKEY

Wellesley at Newton.

BASKETBALL

Lynn Classical at Beverly.
Peabody at Lynn English.
Nashua at Lowell.
Stoneham at Melrose.
Gov. Dummer at Andover.
Milton High at Milton Academy.
Wakefield at Belmont.
Winchester at Woburn.

'Ekkie' Starts

Santa Anita Track, Arcadia, Cal., Feb. 13 (INS). Equipoise, one of the greatest thoroughbreds in the history of American racing, makes his long awaited Santa Anita debut in the sixth race today, the San Diego Handicap, at one mile.

Equipoise has not answered the postward bugle since Nov. 6 when he beat Faireno, Mr. Khayyam and Fleam at Belmont Park on a sloppy track over a mile and a quarter.

Boxing Results

St. Petersburg—Steve Carr, 131, Meriden, Conn., knocked out Kid Balsden, 169, Columbus, Ga., in second round of scheduled 10 rounder.

Portland, Ore.—Freddie Steele, Tacoma, welterweight, decisioned Indian Jimmy Rivers, Fresno (5).

Reading, Pa.—Billy Ketchell, 168, Millville, N. J., outpointed Anson Green, 163, Pittsburgh (10).

DIETZ'S AMBITION

"LONE STAR" Dietz, former coach of the Redskins, is angling for the job as coach of football at Bowdoin.

Dietz has served both as college and professional coach and is thoroughly versed with football.

Adam Walsh, who was at Harvard last fall, is the [illegible] candidate for the Bowdoin post.

Fred Ostergren of Arlington High could have the Bowdoin coaching job if he wished it. He formerly coached at Bowdoin, but prefers remaining at Arlington. Ostergren was a member of the Boston Evening American's Board of Schoolboy Football Control. He is one of the most able football coaches in the country.

TIME PREDICTS NEW RECORD

CAPABLE OF 5 MILES PER MINUTE

By Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 13—The man who watches the clocks believes that Sir Malcolm Campbell, last of the thunder riders to drive an automobile above 200 miles an hour, will better 300 this time—and finish breezing, as all champions do.

T. Warren B[illegible], a slim dark energetic young man who goes in for speed himself, has had his fingers on the mechanical pulse that [illegible] Sir Malcolm ever since the jaunty Englishman started breaking speed records at Daytona Beach in 1928.

Goes in 2nd

PHILLIS R. FANCIED IN OPENER

By Dave Wilson

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 13—Idle Victory sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb in the six furlongs of the second number here tomorrow afternoon.

Phillis R, Krona, Holdum Brown

FIRST RACE—$800, maiden [illegible]

[illegible]

PHILLIS R, a full sister to the fleet Happy Go, may upset the highly fancied KRONA in this event. The Happy Argo filly has displayed a world of speed in her morning trials. HOLDUM BROWN is the contender.

Idle Victory, Air Line, Happy Find

SECOND RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds, six furlongs

[illegible]

IDLE VICTORY was barely headed by Recovery in a swiftly-run race last time. Contention, if any, will be furnished by AIR LINE. The latter should have won his last start. HAPPY FIND for the remainder.

Last Time, Sun Idol, Lady Laura

[illegible]

LAST TIME was evidently dead short of work, when he finished fourth behind Ridge Mor a few days back. SUN IDOL shapes up as the one to fear. LADY LAURA is a possibility.

Dinn Bin, Wilrob, Annarita

FOURTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, seven furlongs [illegible]

DING BIN, the top figure horse, is on the also eligible list. If he remains in the barn then look for WILROB to romp off with the lion's share of the spoils. The latter is sharp as a tack right now. ANNARITA has a good fighting chance.

Judge Schilling, Trey, Predict

FIFTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, seven furlongs [illegible]

Just have to give JUDGE SCHILLING one more chance. The aged son of Hand Grenade was in close quarters soon after the break in his last start and had scant chance thereafter. TREY, a brisk morning worker, figures to offer the contention. PREDICT should break into the picture.

Stick Handle, Right Rank, Foreign Lady

SIXTH RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds, one mile 16

xMettle	91	Dancing Boy	112
Arakay	98	Matar	112
xCousin George	113	Shot and Shell	113
Big Red	120	xMaster Lad	101

STICK HANDLE was barely nosed out by Night Signal last time. The fast working RIGHT RANK is strictly the one to fear. FOREIGN LADY is capable of upsetting the dope if up to one of her good races.

Master Lad, Big Red, Cousin George

SEVENTH RACE—$1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one eighth miles

xSlave	106	Stickhandle	114
Mae Shilling	106	xRight Rank	106
xForeign Lady	101	xBirkasman	106

Weather clear, track fast.

Post 2:15 p. m.

MASTER LAD, a clever winner at the meeting, is tossed into this event with a feather of 101 pounds. A smooth ride would just about clinch top honors. BIG RED, the main danger, was headed by Stall Mann last time. COUSIN GEORGE figures next best.

FLASH HOLLETT GETS RAISE

[illegible]

Although they did not comment on Shore's performance after the game, probably because they were [illegible] afraid the deviation might break their comments on Mike Rodden [illegible] total, the Leafs are most certainly lauding Shore to the [illegible] in New York.

[illegible]

But it was during the overtime period that Shore was at his best. Following "Pep" Kelly's goal in the sixth minute of this chapter, the Bruins were apparently fighting for a lost cause . . . But Shore started another play which terminated when Kaminsky scored his second goal, and, for the fourth time, the Bruins had pulled up on even terms with the fast stepping Leafs . . . Even then Shore was not through, for 13 seconds after the B's had tied the game 5-all he raced down with Clapper and the big right winger counted with the tally that gave Boston one of the hardest earned victories in years.

Bill "Flash" Hollett featured for the Maple Leafs with two goals . . . His first was a gem, for he beat Tiny Thompson from the right boards on a solo dash and a perfect shot . . . Captain Happy Day of the Leafs has made a star out of the rookie from Cape Breton . . . Hollett is on his way to make some real money. When his present contract expires a year from this spring, he will receive almost double his present salary . . .

Training Jaunt to Southlands to Cost Million

By PAT ROBINSON

International News Service Sports Writer

New York, Feb. 1[illegible]—[illegible]

[illegible]

Many millions must be added for promotion, equipment and maintenance of sports and, if you toss in the sums wagered on various sports events, the total would stagger the imagination of [illegible]

[illegible] $1,000,000 spring training [illegible]

Clubs Lose Dough

Rarely, if ever, does any club make money on a Spring training jaunt. The best any club can hope for is to reduce the overhead.

Just to give you a faint idea of what it means to take a ball club [illegible] training camp, Ed Barrow of the Yankees today gives you a few figures.

First there is the cost of transporting some 500 ball players of the 16 major league clubs to and from the training camps, most of which are in Florida.

The players make their home anywhere from Maine to California, and the railroad fares in themselves are no trifling sum. Then they must be put up in first rate hotels for several weeks and their meals paid for by the club.

Then there is the cost of new uniforms and other baseball equipment, the conditioning of the playing fields, doctors bills, etc., to say nothing of the cost of club secretaries, coaches, trainers and managers.

150 Rookies

Of the 500 players who will go South in the next few weeks at least 150 are out of the minor leagues. If 32 of these, or two per club, make the major league grade, the clubs will feel themselves well repaid. If half a dozen rise to stardom, the 1935 crop of rookies will be labeled A1.

It's a game where many are called, but few are chosen, and those few are extremely expensive these days.

Filene's Rolls 1543 in Store League

MARTIN HAS STRING OF 141 IN BANK COMPETITION

By Ed Cogswell

Visiting the local alleys, I learned that Filene's, of the Retail Stores League, at Shanleys, had boosted the league team record to 1543 . . . Peden's excellent bowling was the cause . . . He connected for a total of 341 pins . . . Jones' 316 and Ferry's 308 helped, too, of course.

Martin sprung a surprise on the members of the First National Bank League when he dug up enough spares and strikes to make 141 in the final string . . . Now Martin can do some crowing for he has set a new league record . . . Pays to watch out for the dark horses.

When 535 pins can win $100 in a five string [illegible], it looks like [illegible] of the [illegible] bowlers have a good chance for copping the prize . . . Nickerson did this in the Bowlaway $250 roll-off . . . Judging from the first three roll-offs scores around the 500 notch is good enough for a slice of the prize money . . . The bowlers are now hard at it getting on the board for the February cash hung up by the N. E. B. A.

At the Huntington Club, Carter of the Hotel and Travel News League, went away from the post like a sprinter . . . When the initial string was posted it was found that he had 137 of the maples in the pits . . . A new season's three-string record of 354 was made by McKay of the Boston Gas Co. League, at the 20th Century . . . His best string was the second with 131.

The Marketmen's League is showing class these days . . . In the last session Brattin, Jr., paraded out in front with 346 . . . He is mighty proud of this feat . . .

Mike McNulty is surely getting into his true form . . . In the City Hall League he rattled off a total of 320 . . . Hard to down the old-timers . . . Frahey walked off with a string of 132 in the Insurance League at New Boston . . . Hall, however, gained the honor of best total with 335 . . . Peak was close up, though having to his credit 332. Frahey was in third place, the best he could do being 325.

JOHNSON Will STAY

SOX-YANKEES TRADE JOKE

By Joe Cashman

If your envoy didn't have a calendar hanging up over this typewriter, he'd swear today were April 1, as he reads of the latest deal the New York Yankees hope to pull off.

Cousin Egbert Barrow, who directs Colonel Jake Ruppert's baseball enterprises, wants Roy Johnson, Red Sox fleet outfielder and leading hitter.

In return [illegible] Yanks [illegible] Walter McQuinn [illegible] first-sacker to the Fens.

It seems though he has a suspicion that Eddie Collins might not go for that man for man swap. So he hints, if forced, he might throw in another second [illegible] infielder for good measure.

[illegible] worry about being [illegible]

There have been many silly baseball transactions proposed but this [illegible] takes the prize.

The Sox would give their best [illegible] for a first baseman who is rated no more highly than "Babe" Dahlgren and another [illegible] no better than some of the young bench warmers [illegible]

Officials [illegible] that the Sox wouldn't consider this deal [illegible] the return of Eddie Collins from Philadelphia [illegible] Miss [illegible] who tends the switchboard on Jersey street, could turn down the Barrow proposal without fear of being reprimanded by her boss.

In fact she'd probably [illegible]

PUSH 'EM UP

Only if [illegible] Lazzeri and a winning pitcher were offered in exchange could the Sox management consider a New York bid for Johnson.

[illegible]

Incidentally, Mr. Barrow better not be in a hurry about getting [illegible] McQuinn.

The young first sacker might come in very handy [illegible] who is asking [illegible]

Something or other prevented "Rabbit" Maranville from [illegible] Boston [illegible] He was [illegible] heard from at [illegible] headquarters. He is now expected [illegible] today.

New Red Sox Trainer Boosts Cunningham

Logan Friend of Mile Ace

By Walter Kiley

A conscientious athlete who has the old spirit of college sacrifice is Glenn Cunningham. The Kansan's goal is Berlin, where he hopes to win both the 1500 and 5000 meter Olympic races.

[illegible]

"I just hope Joe Cronin's ball players prove to be half as amenable to a conditioning program as Cunningham is," stated Logan recently. "He is the most conscientious athlete I ever worked with."

Cunningham spent the [illegible] before [illegible] the Wanamaker Mile [illegible]

AMENABLE

GLENN CUNNINGHAM

"There was nothing prearranged about Cunningham's mile tactics in that particular race" states Logan.

"In fact he seldom plans a race so that as he views next Saturday's meeting with Bonthron, Venzke, Ny and Harry Williamson, he will allow conditions which arise during the race to govern his tactics.

"If you remember, each quarter of the Wanamaker Mile was run in faster time than the one preceding.

CONFIDENCE

"He wanted to run an even race with a very gradual acceleration over the second half.

"The slow first quarter threw out those calculations. It compelled him to pile on the pace in accumulative fashion.

That is because he is a competitive runner who, like a thoroughbred, has the spurt to kill off opposition.

"Those who feel that Venzke erred in starting his sprint too soon rather than waiting for the bell lap forget that Glenn would have opened up at the same time and never would have given Venzke a chance to jump him.

"Venzke's effort was psychological in that it might have, but didn't, crack Cunningham mentally.

"Cunningham is far from conceited. But he knows his own ability and has loads of confidence and realizes well that he is Venzke's master, so that if the Penn miler had postponed his sprint until the final backstretch the race would have been robbed of its big thrill."

Lights Flash From Mars

Communication Between Planets By Heliograph Possible If Life Exists There

Peering through a telescope at Flagstaff, Arizona, in 1894, the late Percival Lowell saw two bright points of light flash forth from Mars, shine for a few moments, and then gradually disappear.

It afterward developed that what Lowell saw was probably a flash [illegible] of sunlight reflected from an ice-covered hillside on our neighboring planet.

Los Angeles, Feb. 13—History certainly does repeat itself in the movies. Conrad Nagel, who for years and years was Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's white-haired boy, is back on the lot. But this time Conrad won't be making soap box speeches, he'll do only his acting.

Louella O. Parsons

He is chosen for the male lead in "Order Please," a murder mystery play to be produced by Bernard Hyman which goes into immediate production with Jack Conway directing. Jack has to get it finished in time to sail for Europe in April and especially interesting is the word that this will be Ruth Gordon's debutant film. She plays a telephone operator.

Two reasons why Ricardo Cortez bowed out of playing the grownup lead in Jackie Cooper's picture "Dinky." One is that he objected to playing just a nice young man in the movies and the other because he felt he would be [illegible] to Jackie. Ricardo [illegible] has a terrible [illegible] and [illegible] to be permitted to direct this picture which [illegible] had great possibilities as a Cooper vehicle. [illegible] has been signed [illegible]

M[illegible] will be back [illegible] W[illegible] studio [illegible] end of the week [illegible] the [illegible] Hollywood Bowl production of "Midsummer Night's Dream." Max Reinhardt [illegible] He [illegible] photograph Mick[illegible] from the waist up and then show George Pr[illegible] in the long shots. What a pity that Mickey should have broken his leg in the middle of what was probably be one of the most interesting pictures ever produced in our time. At least that is what we believe after having seen the sets and the costumes.

Chatter in Hollywood: It's no longer any news that Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard are secretly married. But it is news that Charlie admitted it at a recent party. A guest at this very small affair composed of Charlie's closest friends, whispered that Charlie, in the presence of this gathering, said that Paulette had been Mrs. Chaplin for over a year but he refused to say when and where the ceremony had been performed.

'Woman in Red' on Two Screens

Big names continue to take the spotlight at the jubilee celebration at the Keith Memorial, which opens its third week on Friday with the "Casino de Paree" revue.

The internationally famous show has Milton Berle, one of Broadway's favorite fun-makers as its star. Lew Brown, whose librettos and lyrics have been among the best sellers for seasons, wrote the entire production, which has music by Harry Akst and scenery and dance numbers by Clark Robinson.

Cardini, the "suave deceiver," Chilton and Thomas, Barbara Jason, the Six Rosebuds and Nat Eagle's Gentlemen are other principals in the gay production, which comes to Keith's exactly as it played to capacity business for more than a year on Broadway.

On the screen will be "Murder on a Honeymoon," featuring Edna Mae Oliver and James Gleason.

Barbara Stanwyck's latest starring picture, "The Woman in Red," opens the week's new film programs at the Paramount and Fenway tomorrow.

Gene Raymond, Genevieve Tobin and Dorothy Tree are featured in the cast, and the film has been adapted from Wallace Irwin's popular novel, "North Shore."

The companion picture on the new program is Warner Oland, in "Charlie Chan in Paris," the seventh in the series of mystery detective stories by Earl Derr Biggers, concerning the adventures of the engaging Oriental detective from Punch Bowl Hill.

Mary Brian, Erik Rhodes, Dorothy Appleby and Ruth Peterson are in the supporting cast, and Charlie Chan's son makes his screen debut in the presence of Keye Luke.

Fight Fascists

Fascist propaganda and instructors at Harvard University were opposed today by the National Student's League, an organization with communistic inclinations. The League issued a press bulletin calling for cancellation of the reported appointment of an Italian Fascist, Professor Corrado Gini, to the faculty. Professor Gini is credited with being the man who persuaded Mussolini to stimulate the birth rate in Italy.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

When 'Judge Lynch' Commands

Almost Hanged for Murder by Furious Mob

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY.

You know, boys and girls, they say it takes all kinds of people to make a world. Well, I say it takes all kinds of stories to make an adventure column. Today's adventure is far off the beaten track and it comes to us from Vincent Batir of Blue Island, Ill.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Vince has settled down now, but a few years ago he decided to follow Horace Greeley's advice and go West, and not having the necessary cash for a railroad ticket he says he joined the "National-Side-Door Pullman Rider's Association" and became a first class "Knight of the Road."

Well I don't believe much in [illegible] kind of [illegible] as a rule but Vince [illegible] [illegible] came so near [illegible] up [illegible] murder [illegible] grave [illegible] tell.

Vince says he was heading for the land of sunshine and real estate salesmen [illegible] California"—and was making good [illegible] under the circumstances. Los Angeles was the town he picked for his goal, but he ran into difficulties at El Centro, California, a little desert town about 250 miles from the Coast.

Well, sir, as Mr. Batir, transcontinental traveler, stepped out of his private compartment—an empty icebox in a refrigerator car—in the Southern Pacific Railroad yards at El Centro he was spotted by a gentleman known to the "Knights" as a "Railroad Bull." The gentleman was plenty rough to our tourist.

"Where do you think you're going?" he asked Vince.

And then, Vince says—before he had a chance to answer—the policeman proved he was no gentleman by tapping Vince on the head with his club. Vince could "take it" in those days and so he "took it on the lam," which means that he ran away—as fast as he could—from the law. He was dazed by the blow but he considered himself lucky to get away without being arrested.

Vince got over to the highway safely and thought he was lucky again when he picked up a nice fat pocketbook. It looked like it was packed with bills and it was—with salesbills! Vince was disappointed but he was also hungry and the pocketbook itself was gold trimmed so he brushed himself off and headed for a little restaurant in the town.

"Is this good for a hot-dog?" Vince asked the manager as he tendered the wallet. The man took the pocketbook and eyed it keenly. Then he called over a tall, thin, determined looking gent with a .45 strapped to his belt, whispered something to him and showed him the wallet. The tall man grabbed Vince.

"Where did you get this?" he asked and Vince noticed the star on his shirt. Vince told him the truth.

"Sure you didn't kill Bill Franklin? We found his body this morning and YOU'RE UNDER ARREST."

Vince thought the tall man was fooling, but when they got outside he knew he wasn't.

A small crowd of grim-faced townspeople had gathered around the restaurant and they announced that they had no intention of letting the law take its course. Vince didn't have a friend in the whole town. The deputy sheriff who had arrested him tried to hold back the revengeful crowd but they pushed him out of the way and took Vince prisoner.

Vince says he pleaded with the infuriated crowd but he was so excited that his words didn't make sense. They started down the street with him and one of them ran over to the hardware store to get a rope. Others joined the procession and from the way they acted Vince knew that the dead man had many friends in that town.

Well sir, Vince says the [illegible] deputy didn't give up [illegible] as it seemed. He went on [illegible] with the crowd to [illegible]

"Maybe the [illegible]" he said.

The crowd [illegible] then they questioned Vince [illegible] Vince says he [illegible] him think of [illegible] that he was [illegible] the train that [illegible] The [illegible] went [illegible] the [illegible] and marched [illegible]

"Find the railroad detective," he begged, "he saw me get off the train."

The leaders talked it over and decided that Vince had a right to that last chance to prove his innocence. They turned into the yards and Vince says he never thought he would pray for the sight of a "Railroad Bull," but he did. They found the "Bull" and he took a look at Vince.

"Looks like the guy," he said. "But I'm not sure—I didn't get a good look at him."

Vince says his hopes sank. He thought the "Bull" was deliberately sacrificing him.

COMMUNITY Found FORGING Ahead

By B. C. FORBES

Reading, Pa., Feb. 13—It's good to get away from New York and to mingle with "typical" Americans.

Somebody once wittily remarked that Wall Street deals only with symbols, with tokens, whereas the rest of the country deals with realities—meaning that the financial world's business is done in bonds and stocks, pieces of paper which represent actualities, represent the factories and institutions and mines and railroads and utilities and other properties which function throughout the nation.

B. C. Forbes

Reading is an old-established, essentially industrial city. Its major enterprise, the Reading Iron Company, will shortly celebrate its hundredth anniversary. And in this solid, robust community are various concerns which have reached first place in their lines.

What, how, are conditions here?

First, let me relate a significant fact.

For the first time in several years, President P. N. Guthrie, Jr., of Reading Iron, has felt justified in calling in his sales representatives from every corner of the continent. Mr. Guthrie tells me that, whereas he had heretofore analyzed such an expense as unwarranted in view of national conditions, he feels that the time has come when an increased volume of business can be rounded up through aggressive sales and advertising effort.

At this gathering the spirit of the men, I discovered, was far from defeatist. They will return to their respective territories full of enthusiasm, energy, determination.

"The company's business has already improved sufficiently to provide work for a normal number of hours for its normal working force.

Consider this: Employment in Reading at the beginning of this month showed a gain of 3000 over the peak of 1934.

Bank clearings last month topped January of last year by $2,000,000.

This is the home of the largest full-fashioned stocking mills in the world, the Berkshire Knitting Mills. They are giving employment to 5000. The hosiery industry has been more fortunate than many other industries for some years. When you ask why, you get a two-word explanation, "shorter skirts." This concern ships its product to almost every country in the world.

The textile machine works, employing an average of 2000, is the largest builder of textile machines in the world.

Another "largest" enterprise is the Carpenter Steel Company, which produces more high-grade alloy steel than any other organization in the United States.

Still another "largest" is Luden's, Inc. Almost 1000 men and women are engaged turning out mentholated cough drops. Forty different countries are customers.

You are told, also, that Wilson's Products, Inc., turn out more aeronautical and industrial goggles than any other plant on the face of the earth.

If you want to see the largest manufacturer of shoelaces in the world, you have to visit the Nansen Fabrics Company, another Reading plant.

The Vanity Fair silk mills, local citizens boast, manufacture the finest of fine silk underwear. Another concern, E. RichardMeinig Company, gives work to 600 making underwear for distribution under jobbers' and retailers' trade names.

Stock Market Timetable

10-11—Shares moved in a narrow range during the initial hour. Rails and metals were steady. Miners were firm. Utilities were easy. American Telephone was down more than 1. Turnover was 100,000 shares.

11-12—Stocks drifted aimlessly in the second hour. Price changes were confined to minor fractions. American Can, a strong spot, was up about 2. Sales approximated 260,000 shares.

12-1—Firm tone prevailed in the third hour. Utilities recovered fractionally from the lows. Trading remained slow and sales approximated 260,000 shares.

1-2—Extreme dullness featured in fourth hour dealings. Price changes were of an unimportant nature.

GAINS SCORED IN DULLNESS

Leading issues pointed higher in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange. Trading was dull.

Edison featured with a gain of nearly 7.

Waltham Watch preferred rose more than 2 while Mergenthaler and Northern Railways of N. H. added a point or so.

Smaller gains were noted in New England Telephone and United Shoe common.

STOCKS Steady at CLOSE

DULL TRADING PREVAILS

New York, Feb. 13—The Stock Market drifted listlessly today in a narrow range.

Despite the continued uncertainty over the gold case, mining shares improved under the leadership of U. S. Smelting.

Railroad stocks, however, were heavy with fractional losses registered by New York Central, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway and other trading favorites.

Utilities were quiet and generally Columbia Gas which declined fractionally to a new 1934-1935 low.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and other steel shares were quiet and rather easy apparently reflecting the decline in operations. American Can, though, was in consistent demand.

General Motors was lower but Chrysler worked fractionally higher. Motor equipments were dull as were the rail equipments, aviations, liquors and specialties.

Chemicals, oils, aviations and farm equipments marked time.

Power Output

Wall Street was of course disappointed that the gold decision hurdle was not crossed over the holiday, but seemed less concerned about it than in recent weeks.

The estimate of steel production at well under the previous week was not particularly disturbing because it was anticipated, in view of the sharp and partly contra-seasonal rise in steel production during the past two months.

Counterbalancing the steel showing was the estimate of electric power production for last week, showing a better than seasonal gain over the previous week, and an increase of 6.8 per cent over the like week of last year.

Secretary Morgenthau's statement of the determination to use the big stabilization fund to prevent gyrations of dollar exchange when the gold decision comes out had reassuring effect. It was interpreted as further evidence that the present dollar will be maintained, regardless of the nature of the decision, and that deflationary repercussions will be prevented.

Corporate news was moderately favorable. Eastman Kodak increased its annual dividend rate to $5 from $4. Dupont reported over the holiday that its 1934 earnings amounted to $3.66 a share, against $3 for 1933, and that its munitions business contributed only 1 per cent of its earnings.

United Verde

New York, Feb. 13 (AP)—Indications of a contest for control of United Verde Copper C. were seen in Wall Street today in the presence of officials of both American Smelting Co. and Phelps Dodge Corp. at the Verde Co.'s annual meeting.

Recovery

Economic Problems Are Discussed

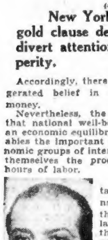
By M. S. RUKEYSER

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

New York, Feb. 13—The intense interest in the gold clause decision of the Supreme Court tends to divert attention from the real job of restoring prosperity.

Accordingly, there is again exaggerated belief in the power of money.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that national well-being hinges on an economic equilibrium, which enables the important social and economic groups of interchange among themselves the products of their hours of labor.



M. S. Rukeyser

On the monetary side, it is naive to assume that the legislative branch of the government will abrogate its soverign right to re-edit the dictionary — to define the dollar in accordance with what it believes to be the greatest good for the greatest number.

Clipping coins in one way or another represents the historic technique for relieving the load of existing debts. It is the rugged way to defeat the implications of the compound interest table.

Incidentally, the shabby treatment which the long term creditor has traditionally received has long been an argument in favor of equity commitments in a balanced investment diet.

Oversophistication in financial matters is sometimes costly.

On wealthy business man, however, believes that ignorance in investment matters is not to be encouraged.

Accordingly ,he goes over his financial statement with his wife once a year.

Recently he showed the present value of an investment which cost $12,000 as $300. His wife naively said to him:

"Obviously, this is a typographical error."

But unfortunately it wasn't.

The same direct simple approach, if applied at the top when the $12,000 investment was carried at $24,000, might have suggested profit-taking.

The new setup in Wall Street provides the greatest financial peep show in history. Under the terms of the Securities Exchange Act, insiders must report their equity holdings, and this delicate subject, which in the new era was a matter for irresponsible gossip has now become a part of the official record. Monthly reports must be made of changes in position. The rule applies to officers and directors and to all persons holding 10 per cent or more of an equity security in any listed corporation.

To old timers in the street, this new searchlight of publicity seems strange. One veteran financier told me:

"If I must live in a gold fish bowl, I will do nothing. I would rather live on my principal than have to tell the world of my speculative blunders and successes."

On the other hand, in former times, the street perhaps made a fetich of liquidity, and capital danced in and out of industry with lightning rapidity. Perhaps under the new regime financiers will be more deliberate before making new commitments, and will feel greater sense of responsibility in the matter of rushing to an exit.

The first reports have been systematically classified in an arresting new booklet entitled "Who are the insiders," by Julius G. Berens.

The monthly shifts will be more interesting than the items in the society columns, though the present experiment narrows the arena of what we once looked upon as legitimate privacy.

In the wicked old days, investors used to ask: "What is the future of this industry?" Now with a bill pending in Congress to abolish public utility holding companies on January 1, 1940, investors are literally inquiring: "Has this industry a future, and, if so, for how long?" This effort, which is analogous to ending the traffic problem by abolishing automobiles, is scarcely conducive to reviving financial confidence.

Retention of Our Gold Necessary to National Defense

THE United States has more gold than any other country.

That is at once a source of national strength and national weakness.

It is our strength in that it permits us to buy abroad whatever we may need from abroad in time of war while limiting enemy purchases to the extent of his gold supply.

It is a source of weakness IF IT IS NOT ADEQUATELY DEFENDED BY A SUFFICIENCY OF EVERY MEANS OF MODERN WARFARE.

A NATION'S gold reserves are its sinews of war only when there are enough trained men, enough guns, warships, submarines and airplanes to defend them and permit their use for purposes of national development and defense.

Without such preparedness THEY ARE AN ADDITIONAL TEMPTATION TO THE ENEMY.

But gold reserves are not defended solely by arms and armaments.

Their defense in times of peace calls for the utmost astuteness on the part of those in charge of the national finances.

They may be lost without the firing of a shot.

They may evaporate in the manipulations of foreign exchange.

THE nation that "never lost a war and never won a conference" has not been specially astute in its financial dealings with other nations.

What the World War cost us in our direct participation was the folly of leaders insufficiently prepared against the wiles of foreign diplomats.

What we lent to other powers engaged in the war was also the folly of our political leaders.

But the thousands and thousands of millions of dollars we lent to foreign governments after the war was partly a political and partly a financial blunder—a blunder on the part of financial leaders who should have seen the hopelessness of the return of our money.

IN other words there is urgent need of FINANCIAL as well as MILITARY defense.

It must be made impossible for foreign defaulters to go deeper and deeper into our debt privately as well as nationally.

Thanks to wisdom of the kind that locks the stable door when the horse has gone, we have made it illegal for defaulting nations to market their securities in the United States, but there are various other methods by which the foreigner may manipulate the international financial set-up to his advantage and to our disadvantage.

Financial preparedness against foreign exchange trickery is another line of the national defense.

ONE means of such defense would be to decree that instead of exporting gold to foreign defaulter nations in settlement of international transactions, the difference against us should be paid with FOREIGN IOU'S now in the United States Treasury.

Keep our gold for the national defense and improve the national defense in order that we may keep our gold.

Sound finance is good defense and good defense is sound finance.

Clumsy Meddling

Build Up With Wages

THE enormous recent decrease in American exports of raw cotton and finished cotton goods is disquieting.

It is a warning of the consequences of placing economic policy in the hands of well-intentioned bunglers and theorists.

Enforced cotton scarcity and resultant high prices turn foreigners away from our cotton and cotton goods.

It is apparent that continuation of such conditions will result in the permanent establishment of other sources of supply so that our export markets will be PERMANENTLY IMPAIRED.

Thus it follows that the administration's well-intentioned, but clumsy meddling, may prove destructive to American commerce as well as industry.

Once the damage has been done, it will take many future administrations to overcome the harm that unenlightened interference will inflict on the creative forces of American business.

NEW Dealers seem reluctant to recognize the simple fact that for wealth to be distributed it must first be CREATED.

Furthermore, that the best creation of wealth is by busy industry and the best distribution of wealth is in liberal wages to regularly employed workers.

The government unfortunately is building insecurely from the top down.

It should lay the foundations of prosperity in active industry.

Anarchy Breeders

Freeing Criminals

AS long as the professional criminal can look forward to pardon or parole through political pull, sentimentality or actual bribery of officials the law-enforcing branches of our national, State and municipal governments will eventually have their morale shaken—unless they are controlled by men of steel.

Governor White, of Ohio, before he left office, pardoned SEVENTY-SIX penitentiary and reformatory inmates. This the record of his last six weeks in office.

The list included men who had been convicted of murder, embezzlement, arson, robbery, burglary, public graft, sex crimes and financial transgressions.

Governor Murray, of Oklahoma, freed on parole scores of convicted criminals. No track has been kept of any of these men and they are roving around the country, a GREATER MENACE THAN FIRE OR HURRICANES.

Texas has a disgraceful record. Governors Ross Sterling and Miriam Ferguson freed over FOUR THOUSAND convicts, among them Clyde and Buck Barrow.

GOVERNOR DAVEY, the new Ohio Executive, lifted the lid a bit when he said in his inaugural address:

"NO SOONER HAD THE NAME OF MY NEW EXECUTIVE SECRETARY BEEN ANNOUNCED WHEN HE WAS APPROACHED BY OFFERS OF MONEY TO HELP SECURE THE RELEASE OF CONVICTED PERSONS."

This condition of affairs is WORSE THAN ACTUAL CRIME ITSELF.

When high public officials connive at breaking down the efforts of Grand Juries, judges and the national Department of Justice, then we have a condition bordering on ANARCHY.

The abuse of the parole and pardon privileges, political pull and official bribery are the CRIMES THAT FOMENT CRIMES.

Jobs in Prison

If You're Unemployed

The annual battle over the sale of prison-made goods is taking place on Beacon Hill.

Mayor Robert Greenwood of Fitchburg, youthful son-in-law of U. S. Senator Coolidge, leads the fight to repeal a State law forcing cities and towns to buy prison-made goods.

Mayor Greenwood wants to help the 500 unemployed in his city.

A schoolhouse there has been razed by fire.

The law, unless evaded, will prevent giving work to the needy in providing furnishings, states Mayor Greenwood.

This is because prison-made furnishings are mandatory.

"Must a man go to prison to get a job?"

That's the slogan of the Mayor and his followers.

Prison authorities say convicts are happier if working.

Granted. And so is a free citizen.

LOVE IS LIKE SOIL

Elsie Robinson

We make
A great fuss about Soil—
Poets sing about it,
Artists paint it,
Governments
Wrangle over it,
And every heart
Is bound by ties
Stronger than steel
To some piece of earth,
Be it city alley
Or lordly wilderness.
Yet, what is this Soil
Over which
We make such commotion?
Soil is
A very common thing.
It is not a poem
Nor a mere phenomenon.
Soil is simply
An accumulation
Of common things.
Soil is
An accumulation
Of everything in life—
Big things, little things,
Wise things, silly things,
Pots and potatoes
As well as poems and pearls—
The hobo's wornout sock,
The king's wornout crown,
All these things
Are mingled in Soil.
And through their mingling
Become a bed
For life,
Wherein dead Yesterdays
Become newborn Todays.

Soil is an accumulation
Of common things,
Which by their mingling
Are warmed
To sweet, new life.
Love is like Soil.
We make
A great fuss about Love—
Poets sing about it,
Artists paint it,
Homes and states,
Nations and races
Are bound together
By it,
Or split
Because of it,
And every life
Revolves about it
From the cradle
To the grave,
Yet, what is this Love
Over which
We make such commotion?

Love is like Soil.
A very common thing—
Not a poem
Nor a rare phenomenon,
But an accumulation
of common things—
Common acts and experiences,
Dreams and rebellions,
Triumphs and disappointments,
Wise acts and silly ones,
Brave swoops of adventure,
Tall leaps of inspiration
And endless hours
Of meaningless drifting.
Love is an accumulation
Of all of these things—
Shared—
And therein
Lies its wonder.

For Love is like Soil—
As commonplace things,
By their mingling,
Become something new,
Something better,
Something potent
And powerful
In which new life
Is born
So are commonplace happenings,
Commonplace spirits—
By their sharing—
Quickened and transformed,
Made stronger and wiser,
Purer and more passionate.
Yes, in its essence.
Love, like Soil,
Is only an accumulation
Of common things—
Common things mingled,
Common things shared.
But they Must ALL be shared.
You cannot make Good Soil
By mingling
Only rich, rare things.
Life would not grow
In such Soil.
Roots need
The hobo's wornout sock
As well as
The king's wornout crown
For nourishment.
And, by the same token,
You cannot make
Good Love
By sharing only
Pretty, pleasant things—
Hearts need
Shared sweat and tears
As well as
Smiles and triumphs—
Before real Love can come.

Mingling—
That is the secret
Of real Soil.
Sharing—
That is the secret
Of real love.

Everything shared—
Wisdom, foolishness,
Strength, weakness,
Good breaks, bad breaks,
Everything shared
Without pride or distinction,
Without resentment
Or recrimination.
Everything shared
Patiently, generously,
Bravely, good naturedly.
That is the secret
Of Long Love.

If we knew that
Before we started,
We might not make
Such a sad mess
Of Loving.

The Hauptmann case has been more than a trial; it's been a tribulation.

Mr. Bilbo may be a "hell raiser" in Mississippi, but the best he has been able to do in the U. S. Senate has been to make a noise like a church mouse.

After reading Napoleon's love letters to Josephine and remembering what happened at Waterloo, we are convinced that the pen is mightier than the sword.

For almost two years the federal government has been trying to aid the little fellow when all along it's been the big fellow who needed help.

We need to increase our imports. For example, the money due us from debtor nations.

Northampton reports Smith College girls get about 9000 letters a day. That's rivalling the Hollywood stars.

Premier Bennett of Canada makes the news announcement that a treaty of reciprocity is being negotiated between Canada and the United States. But no treaty could make the two any more friendly than they are right now.

Our congressmen are fighting hard to have more New England granite used. Does this action call for a "bloc" or a "block"?

Air's Greatest Ace

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

A gathering of men whose business is airplanes, assembled in New York the other night, voted that Jimmy Doolittle is the best aviator in America. They should not have stopped with our boundaries.

If they said the best aviator in the world there would have been none to deny them. Yes, at that, there would have been one to shake his head "No," and that one would have been Doolittle himself.

Much as he hates the limelight and much as he dodges it, Jimmy Doolittle has no escape. I recall him telling us three years ago that he was done with racing and speed flying, that he was "an old man of 34," and that Mrs. Doolittle thought that he had done his share.

TECHNOLGY DEGREE

A few years before, at her request, he had given up stunt flying, a field in which he had been supreme.

Don't think, though, that Jimmy Doolittle was something of a circus daredevil. He did his stunts for the sake of science and for that reason he holds a degree of Doctor of Aeronautics from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Doolittle—Major James H., to give him his full name and title—was done with racing in 1931. As late as January 3 of this year he repeated that statement with emphasis.

Mind you, this was early last month. And on the fifteenth of January, 1935, a giant airplane built for eight passengers zoomed out of nowhere into the skies above Floyd Bennett Field in New York City and came to earth in a prefect landing.

Only eleven hours and fifty-nine minutes before, that plane had been in Burbank, California.

In less than half a day it had spanned the continent, in record time and in the most hazardous trip that the pilot had made with passengers. And he had done some hazardous flying over a period of seventeen years.

HAD WIFE ABOARD

The pilot was Jimmy Doolittle, the other being an official of an aviation company.

They had flown all night through the clouds and ice with just one glimpse of the earth, and that of snow-capped mountians in Colorado, until they broke through into the sunshine over Richmond, Va.

The radio was not working and they could not use the beam because they were flying between the routes of the trans-Continental airlines.

It was sheer blind flying by night, and had they not been forced as far south as Richmond they would have been in New York an hour and a half earlier.

Take it from the Doolittles, Major and Mrs., that this was not racing or stunting. Why, in a racing plane he certainly would have been across at least an hour sooner!

"The only excuse for aviation," he will tell you, "is that it gets you where you want to go more quickly and safely than any other means of transportation. The day will come when commercial planes will make something like 500 miles an hour."

Major Doolittle is a Californian, having been born in that state in 1896. He left its university and the career of a mining engineer to enlist in 1917. He was a born flier, so good that when he got to Hoboken to take the boat to France they dragged him off and set him to teaching others to fly.

He stayed in the army until 1929. He has done everything in a plane from the incredible outside loop to flying 18,000 feet over the Andes with both of his legs in plaster casts as the result of a fall from a platform 12 feet high.

Listen to what Lieut. Maitland in his book "Knights of the Air" has to say:

"If anyone could be called the finest and most skilful flier in the world, I would nominate Lieut. Doolittle for that honor. He flies with more beauty and more finesse than any other man behind the stick. It is as if his personality exercises its influence over the plane and it becomes a living, understanding thing."

World Progresses

By Hendrik Van Loon

Is there a greater pleasure than to discover that some one else has done a job infinitely better than you could ever hope to do it yourself?

I know of none, and I am therefore deeply and sincerely grateful to a man by the name of Lowenthal for having given us a book that we needed very badly, but that seemed so difficult that nobody, so far at least, had had the courage to try and write it.

Montaigne, the hero of his story, has been well enough known these last four centuries.

But the life of Montaigne that lay buried within his famous autobiographical essays has been a puzzle to even the most ardent Montaigne fans, although these included the names of practically everybody who had ever played a one, two or three-star role within the general domains of politics, the sciences or the arts.

A MODEST FELLOW

This was partly Montaigne's own fault. He was a modest fellow. He could not for the life of him see why posterity should be interested in the deeds he had done as long as it could know the thoughts he had thought.

Now Lowenthal has reconstructed Montaigne's private life out of the scraps of his inner life that were available in his essays, and the result has been as fascinating as it was unexpected.

When a zoologist is given the disjointed bones of some prehistoric cousin with the request, "Here, fit these together and try and reconstruct the creature," he is never quite sure whether he will create a monster or something pleasing to the eye.

The same holds true of human characters that have to be built up out of heterogeneous bits of second and third hand information.

IT HAPPENED BEFORE

But the man Montaigne, who stands revealed before us when Lowenthal gets through with his jig-saw job, is a delightful and charming fellow, even more attractive than his printed works.

Remains the question (and it is sure to be asked by return mail) why should I waste my valuable time reading about somebody who has been dead and buried these last 400 years?

What can he possibly tell me individually that will help me pay my rent in the year 1935, borrow enough to pay my income tax and settle the next instalments on the mortgage and my wife's fur coat?

Lord help me, my friend, just because you happen to have been born at a moment when a certain definite form of civilization has outlive its usefulness and is rapidly coming to an end, and because this frightens you and annoys you and irritates you, do you think that it has never happened before?

BUILT UP BETTER

Why, this story is as old as the hills.

Montaigne lived at the exact moment when the economic system of the Middle Ages, based upon interest derived from the possessions of land, was being replaced by an economic system which allowed people to live on interest derived from the possession of money.

That meant nothing more nor less than a complete and absolute revaluation of all the old values that had been the basis for the entire structure of feudal society.
